High-flyin' fun at the county fair

Eternal 'villagence'

Dear Editor:

Second-story men!...Compulsive builders who would rob us not only of parking spaces, but be guilty of that grandest of Carmel larcenies, view robbery! And as for our greatly diminished mobility, the Moby Dick school of architecture that is already showing ominous signs of overshadowing us would not only further rob us of that eroded element, but also of the warm, intimate relationship with its structures that hardcore Carmelities have earned oak leaf clusters fighting for.

Donald Culross Peattie once spelled out in the New York Times (admittedly a pre-Plaza pronouncement): "Washed by the winds of another ocean stands what is perhaps the prettiest of all towns in American — Carmel." What a Peattie it would be if we were found unworthy of this golden apple, tossed straight from the Big Apple itself!

Yours for eternal villagence.

Save commission office

Dear Editor:

As you know, the governor has taken out of the state budget $319,000 for the Coastal Commission, requiring closure of the Santa Barbara office and "consolidation" of the Santa Cruz and San Francisco offices.

There is no need to tell you how important the Coastal Commission is in the fight against offshore oil, and the importance of having a local, easily accessible office for people needing to process permits in the coastal zone.

The effect of the governor's move is to cause local people to have to drive to San Francisco to process and obtain permits. And since law requires the state to spend up to $10,000 to relocate each employee, there is no real cost savings to state government.

Assemblyman Sam Farr has introduced AB 2443, which has been endorsed by both the Santa Cruz and Monterey County boards of supervisors. AB 2443 would restore funding to the local coastal commission offices. Please write to the governor in support of AB 2443.

Irreparable change

Dear Editor:

Carmel will be irreparably changed if the Carmel Planning Commission at their Aug. 26 meeting approves the monstrous 103-unit apartment complex proposed for the Hayward Lumber Co. yard. To approve this project, the commission could be increasing the density in this area to two to three times that allowed in any other community on the Monterey Peninsula.

This immense complex will create additional traffic hazards and parking problems. It will greatly increase water use, create noise problems and downgrade surrounding property values and it violates all previous planning criteria that prohibited "inharmonious and out-of-scale new development" that help maintain the charm of Carmel.

Those who want to help save Carmel should attend the planning commission public hearing on Aug. 26 to voice their objections to this gross development.

Illegal war

Dear Editor:

The Iran-Contra hearings have aired much rhetoric in defense of Contra aid. The Nicaraguan revolution and the upheavals throughout Central America are portrayed as the result of "Soviet expansionism."

Continual cold war rhetoric has diverted attention from Nicaragua's plight as a Third World nation (about the size of Wisconsin), attempting to address the causes of poverty and underdevelopment and to rebuild with dignity and common sense.

It is this example set by Nicaragua that our administration really fears: what one small impoverished country has accomplished in terms of human needs—health care, education, social services, agrarian reform—and against staggering odds is still in the process of accomplishing.

It is this example, not arms and troops and "Marxist-Leninist" theory, that Nicaragua is "exporting" across her borders. It is this exmaple that our administration has set out to destroy. Therefore Contra attacks are aimed primarily at economic and social welfare projects, and there is hardly a family within a population of three million which has not lost a relative or friend in these attacks.

The polls show that a majority of Americans still opposes Contra aid. This majority must speak out before the vote comes up in Congress in September. Otherwise another hundred or so million of our tax dollars will once again support this illegal, immoral war.

Clocks strike 13

Dear Editor:

In Orwell's 1984, on the face of the menacing edifice of the "Ministry of Truth" were emblazoned in bold letters the slogans of the regime in power: WAR IS PEACE; FREEDOM IS SLAVERY; IGNORANCE IS STRENGTH. The Reaganoids have demonstrated that they subscribe in greater or lesser degree to all of these. They have even added at least two more—AVARICE IS BENEFICENCE; DUPLICITY IS REALITY.

And the clocks are striking thirteen...

The heat is on

IT'S ONLY August and the filing period only closed yesterday, but the election campaign for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board is already heating up.

Peninsula mayors started things off with a bang last Friday by endorsing a "platform" of three candidates for the three contested seats in the Nov. 3 election: James Hughes of Pacific Grove, Paul Davis of Monterey and Sandra Luce Skillicorn of Carmel against two incumbents, Pat Bernardi and Dick Heuer, board chairman. (See related stories this issue.) The 12 mayors (only six are within the district, however) — who haven't always seen eye to eye with the current board — figured a cross-section of representatives from peninsula cities would shift the balance of the board toward the peninsula. The knock on the board now is that it's too top heavy with representatives from Carmel Valley (four out of seven live there).

New faces — especially those with peninsula ties — will bring more "harmony" to the board, the thinking goes. The mayors are obviously smarting from the rebuff they got from the board regarding city water allocations. Shifting the balance over to the peninsula could rectify that situation, they apparently feel.

There's also an inexplicable charge against the board that its members are not as pro-dam as many of "us" would like them to be. Witness the nine years it has taken for the board to get to this juncture, it's pointed out.

There are some problems with all this logic, however. First, it presupposes that because you live in Carmel Valley you have an automatic or inherent bias against the peninsula, and possibly a bias against a dam in your community. Conversely, it also presupposes that because you live on the peninsula you will always agree with others who also live on the peninsula about what's good for the entire community.

There are no guarantees that even if the board were all-peninsula that its members would always work together harmoniously and always agree on what course to take and how to proceed to get a dam built. Harmony is usually achieved by the joining of different voices.

Of the current seven-member board, six have publically — and some strongly — expressed their support of a new dam; only one — John Williams, who has been on the board since its inception — has steadfastly opposed a new dam, and he's not even running for re-election. And, none of the current board members, save for Williams, was on the original board; several board members have come and gone since then.

That's not a criticism of the mayors' platform; the three candidates all are highly respected in their communities and all three have experience in working within a governmental structure. All three would probably make fine board members.

But what if other candidates equally respected, deserving and experienced had filed at a later date? The filing deadline didn't come until five days after the mayors' decision.

Then there's the dam. There doesn't appear to be a whole lot of opposition to the idea itself of a new dam on the Carmel River, the need for it is obvious, especially in this extremely dry year.

There is, however, plenty of opposition and diversity of opinion as to the true reasons for building a $44 million dam. Is it to be built to afford us protection in case of a drought and to maintain the water status quo, or will it fuel the engines of new development and increased tourism, as some fear?

If the advisory vote on the dam were to be worded in such a way as to ask whether the people wanted a dam to pave the way for new development, the dam would be flatly turned down. The only way this dam will ever be built is for the right reasons — and those are reasons each and every one of us have to determine on our own.

We all must make informed decisions and not take stock in hearsay, political puffery, uninformed opinions or even out-and-out wrong statements...from both sides of the fence. Water issues are emotional, highly complicated, politically-involved and sometimes even flat-out boring. But it's incumbent upon all of us to shed the campaign rhetoric and avail ourselves of the facts and vote accordingly. Our future's at stake.

Sunset Center lot

City receives four parking lot proposals

By DAVID LELAND

WITH FOUR proposals for an underground parking lot at Sunset Center sitting in the vault at city hall, it's now time for an ad hoc committee to begin review of those plans.

It's been three months since the Carmel City Council gave city staff the go-ahead to begin soliciting architectural firms by advertising in newspapers and trade journals.

When the deadline ended last Friday, the following companies had submitted copies of their bids: Monterey-based Sunset Park Ltd. and Bay Area firms, Allright Parking, City Park and The Parking Place.

The next step, according acting City Administrator Diane White, will be for appointed members of the council, Carmel Planning Commission and cultural commission to review the proposals and interview representatives of the likely candidates.

The only review members set for the committee thus far are planning commissioners Ed Hicks and Ken White.

In early summer the planning commission found that a parking lot at Sunset Center was in accordance with the city's general plan.

White said she was unsure how many councilmembers or cultural commissioners would be serving on that committee and what the timeline would be for selection of a proposal.

But one thing is certain, no decision will be made without public input.

"There will be lots and lots of opportunity for public comment," White said.

After the committee reviews the proposal, the matter will come before the city council and planning commission, White said.

Last May the council, in a special meeting, put together specific guidelines for those wishing to submit proposals for the parking lot, which will be constructed at the north end of Sunset Center on the dirt lot.

Currently that area is being used as a parking lot.

Before the council set its most recent guidelines, there had been some controversy over the fact that companies seeking to enter the competitive bidding were not being informed.

Instead, EMC Planning Group Inc. had been the only firm actually being courted by the city. It had submitted plans for a multistory underground lot, with a price tag of between $4 million and $5 million.

But after hearing protests from other companies and residents, the council returned EMC's bid and started anew. EMC is a part of the partnership called Sunset Park Ltd.

By the time the city returned EMC's bid it had also received interest from ACUBUILD, resident Ted Leidig and an unnamed Texas-based firm.

•

WHILE EACH of the proposals present much of the same information, they each differ somewhat in philosophy.

All plans show that the parking garage would be financed by the company constructing it, which would also operate it once it is completed through a long-term lease with the city.

Also, all of the companies propose to offer savings to residents and season ticket holders of Sunset Center performances.

Each of the designs call for a park or other city activity to be housed on the street level (San Carlos Street).

Here are some of the highlights from each of the proposals received by the city for construction of a parking lot at Sunset Center:

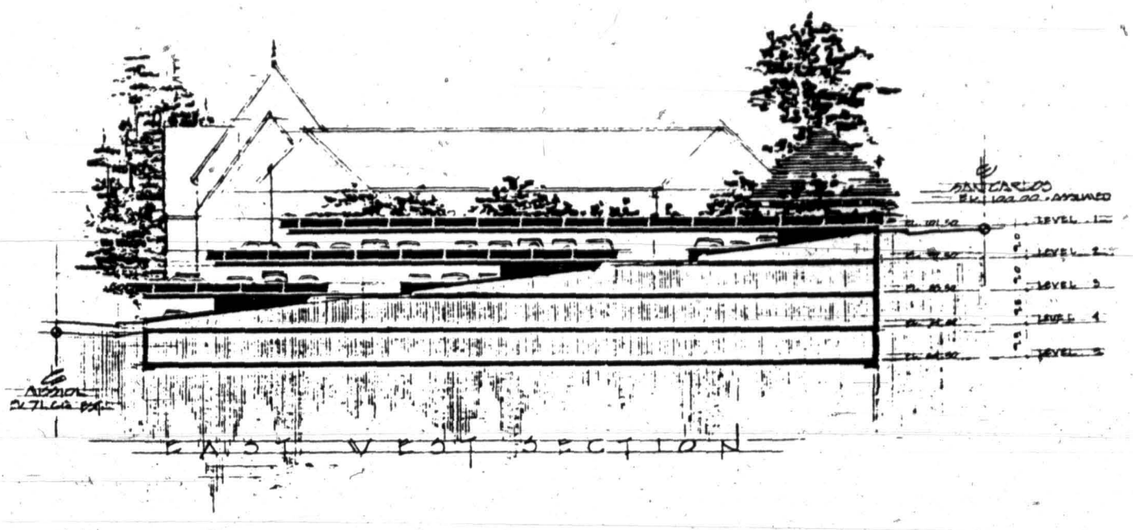
• Allright Parking. David Bogard, executive vice president, told The Pine Cone that his proposal for three or four levels with about 300 spaces was really just a sketch of what could be done in the space.

He said his company would present a model if it were selected to move forward with the project by the committee.

"We don't want to scare anybody with a big model so they think that's what were looking to," he said.

Bogard said he thinks that any more than 300 spaces in the lot would seriously impact the neighborhood. He added that the parking lot would work OK with that many spaces, but the surrounding streets would not bear the additional burden without traffic jams.

• Sunset Parking Ltd. A partnership including EMC, architects Jim Black and Hewitt Clark, plus Salvatore Palma and Sam Caniglia.



ONE OF four proposals the city received for a parking garage at the north end of Sunset Center, Sunset Park Ltd., a consortium of Monterey investors, recommends a four-story affair with 470 spaces.

That design calls for an underground four-story garage with 470 spaces.

The lower two levels of the facility would be used for employee and employer parking, which would be purchased by monthly passes and renewed on a semi-annual basis.

The upper two levels would be for visitor parking, according to Cris Staedler, planning manager.

"Access to the visitor parking is from Eighth Avenue," he said, "to ensure visitor traffic does not encroach on nearby residential neighborhoods."

The Monterey-based firm also includes in its proposal a jitney that would transport users to the beach and back, which the plan says would decrease traffic in the downtown area.

The firm estimates the construction time to be about 21 months, unless an environmental impact report is required, which would add three months to the project.

• The Parking Place. This San Francisco consortium of businesses proposes a two-level garage with 328 spaces.

Calling itself the Sunset Center Parking Associates, the backers of this project include Panzini Corp., Resource Marketing, International Parking Design and Walter Patterson Investments.

David Panzini, president of the Panzini Corp. said the city would do better to put parking on top of the garage because construction costs would be the same and it would add 165 spaces.

He added that his company would comply with the city's design wishes, one of which shows the fire station going on top of the structure.

"The city talked about that (fire station) going on top of the garage," he said.

• City Park. This firm proposed a four-level garage with 400 spaces.

According to Tim Leonoudkis, vice president, the garage will be put on the lot in such a way that there would be room to build a fire station on the side of the building while a park could remain on top.

None of the companies were talking about construction costs at this point, deciding instead to wait until the wishes of the city become clearer.

Ten file for three seats in water board election

By NANCY HILLS

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District board election gained more candidates as the Aug. 12 filing date deadline approached.

Friday saw two previously unannounced hats thrown into the ring, Carmel city treasurer Sandy Skillicorn and John Hammond.

Also filing that day were incumbent Patricia Bernardi and former Pacific Grove City Councilman James Hughes. Both Bernardi and Hughes had earlier stated their intention to file.

Two others, Tom May and Charles Carter had taken out papers but had not filed by The Carmel Pine Cone press time.

Skillicorn is one of three candidates endorsed by the Mayors' Select Committee on Friday, Aug. 7.

Skillicorn, when contacted by The Carmel Pine Cone explained that she was "simply asked by a number of people to run. They simply felt management skills were needed on the board."

Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood was one of the people who asked her to run, Skillicorn said.

"I'm concerned we are running out of water," she said.

As far as the technical side of the water district, Skillicorn said she had a lot of "homework to do."

She has not been following the water board, she confessed, but had been aware for years that a new dam is needed.

Dick Heuer, one of the incumbents up for re-election and current water board chairman, filed his papers with the county last week, but was out of town and unavailable for comment until Monday.

Bernardi is still on vacation and was unavailable for comment.

Heuer was first elected to the board in 1983 but had been appointed to replace Ed Lee, who resigned from the board earlier that year.

Heuer said he decided to run again because "basically, because for the past four years, I have spent about 25 percent of my time working on this proposed dam project. I feel I want to see it through."

The district started the environmental impact report/environmental impact statement process in 1983 and is planning on releasing a draft of the document for public comment in September.

"Building a dam is an unbelievably complicated process," Heuer said in answer to the charges that the board has not progressed rapidly enough with the dam.

"The EIR/EIS has to be reviewed by 40 different state agencies and there are lengthy state water rights negotiations that have to be done," he said. "Five agencies have to review it and issue permits."

"Basically from what I've seen and learned about completion of the process is that experience and an understanding of the issues is absolutely essential to move it through and complete the project," he said. "I feel it is my duty to see it through in a way that does not generate lawsuits that could tie it up for years."

Heuer said various state and federal environmental groups could sue the district and slow the dam's completion.

He has always been in favor of a dam, Heuer said.

"If you read past issues of The Carmel Pine Cone, you will find I'm on record for the past four years of stating we need a new dam," he said.

"The dam needs to serve the people of the peninsula rather than be a blank check for developers," he added. "The issue has not been whether to have a dam but what kind of dam to have. The hard part is what really makes it work is the 'software.' What environmental protection, drought reserve and water for future growth."

John Hammond, who also filed Friday, has no phone number listed and could not be located by The Carmel Pine Cone.

Mayors committee endorses slate of candidates

FIVE DAYS before the filing deadline had passed, the mayors of Monterey County voted to endorse three candidates for three Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board seats up for election Nov. 3.

The mayors voted at a meeting of the City Select Committee noon Friday, Aug. 7 to endorse three candidates who will be running for two incumbent seats and one vacant seat.

Carmel city treasurer Sandy Skillicorn, former Pacific Grove City Councilman James Hughes and Monterey architect Paul Davis were unanimously endorsed by the 12 county mayors — including mayors from outside water management district boundaries and the peninsula.

The candidates will be vying for incumbent Dick Heuer and Pat Bernardi's seats on the board and for a position vacated when boardmember John Williams decided not to run again. Both Heuer and Bernardi were elected in 1983.

Robert Franco, chairman of the committee and mayor of Del Rey Oaks, said the "only reason given by the maker of the motion, Morrie Fisher (Pacific Grove mayor), and the seconder Clint Eastwood (Carmel mayor), for making the motion was an imbalance of representation on the board and not enough boardmembers from the cities."

Franco added that "we may have been a little hasty and I hope we have done the right thing."

Fisher, when contacted by The Carmel Pine Cone stated he decided to make the motion because "the water management district was formed specifically to find more water and not play the games of population control. Since (Sen.) Mello pushed through — though all the present board members have not been on the board — we have had no increase in the water supply. They keep going into various studies for whatever reason."

He had not seen the administrative draft of the EIR/EIS and was not sure the size of dam was being proposed so he could not comment on whether the proposed project was sufficient for the cities' needs.

Eastwood said there seemed to be a consensus that the district was "centralized out in Carmel Valley."

He added he felt very little had been done over the past decade and the "group there now is not doing enough to address the water issue."

Heuer, however, said he feels the district board "represents the district on the whole. This is not an area issue. The issue is what policies one advocates, not where one lives."

He said he believed the mayors committee is upset because "our board rejected their proposal (to increase the water allocation) by 6 to 1."

"When the cities started to run low on water, the mayors requested in April that we simply increase the water allocation to continue their growth. They were very specific that the water be taken from our drought reserve," Heuer said.

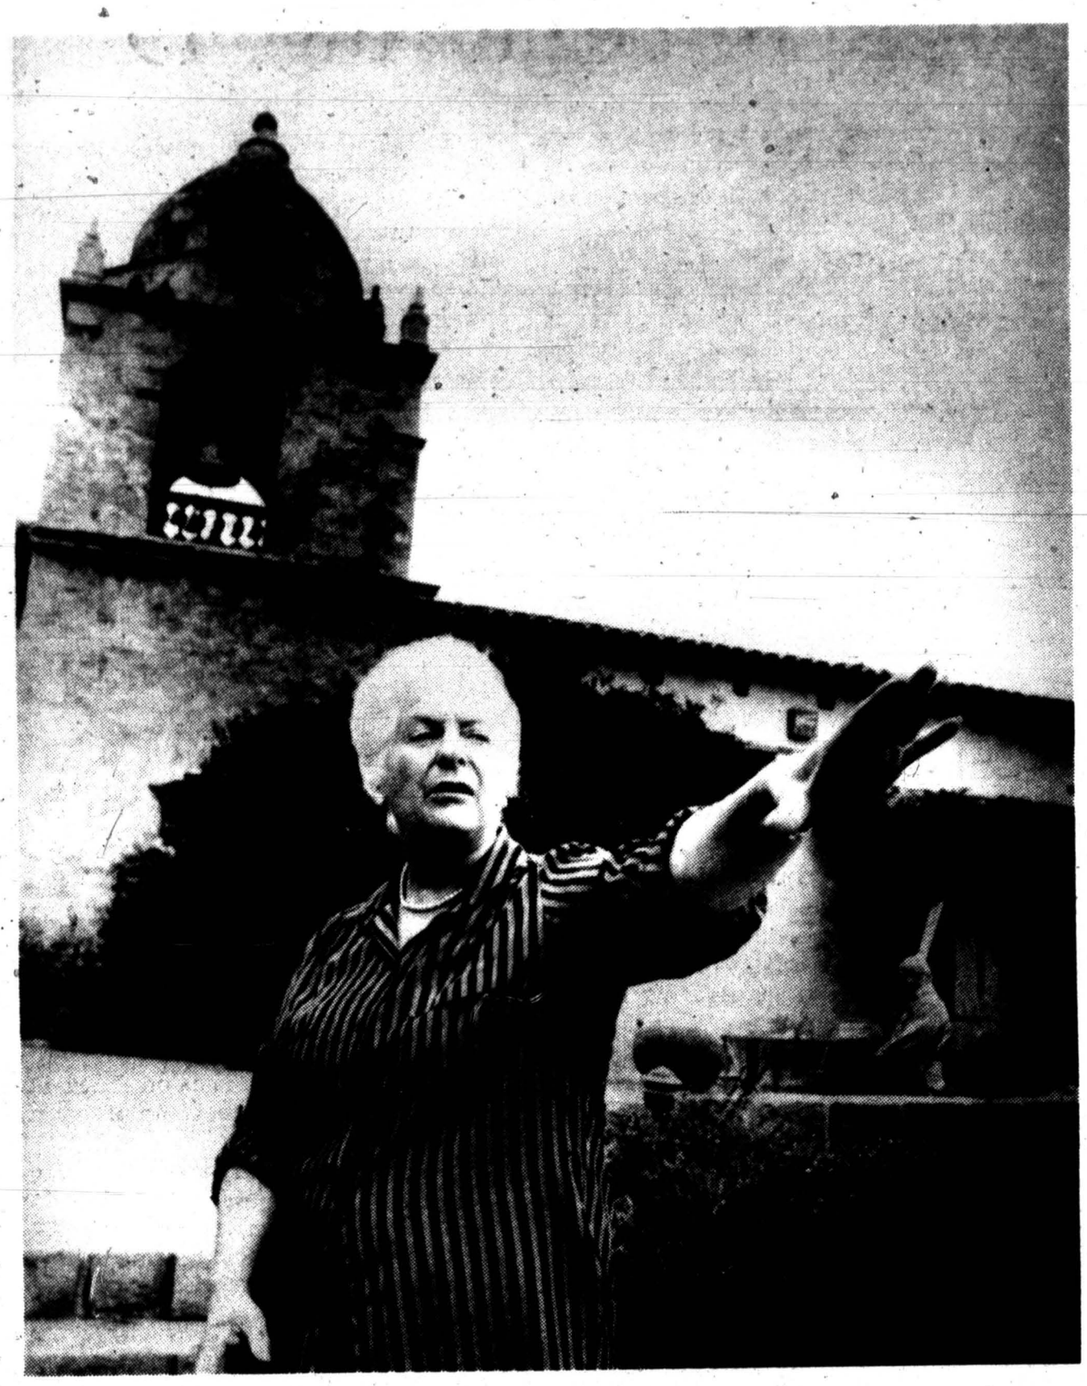
Bruna Odello an integral part of papal visit



FOR THE past 40 years Bruna Odello has been a dedicated churchgoer at the Carmel Mission Basilica. As she points to the quadrangle courtyard where the pope will greet 3,000 people during his visit to Carmel Sept. 17, the missions bell tower looms in the background. (Holly McFarland photo.)

By DAVID LELAND

JUST FOR a moment try to forget about the logistical nightmare connected with the papal visit to the Carmel Mission Basilica Sept. 17. Picture, if you will, a day of peace and beauty.

It's sometimes easy to forget the significance of Pope John Paul II coming to the peninsula. In order to view the other side of the coin, The Pine Cone contacted Carmel resident Bruna Odello, who has been active at the mission for more than 40 years.

"To be a part of this moment blows me away," says Odello. "The people of this area should be honored."

Odello likes to downplay her involvement with the Catholic Diocese of Monterey by calling herself a "servant." But on further examination, she is found to play an integral part in the papal visit.

"I'm a resource person," she says modestly. "If ever they need me all they have to do is call."

Recently, Odello was instrumental in lining up six motor homes that will be used at Laguna Seca Raceway as a dressing room for the priests performing the religious ceremonies and also, storage of the sacred altar vessels.

The pope will say Mass to 100,000 people there before he makes his way to Carmel.

But Odello is most at home at her beloved mission. With its bright flowers, adobe walls and spacious courtyards, Odello led The Pine Cone on a brief tour of the mission as it prepares for the historic day.

The first thing Odello explains is the important role the pope plays in the world.

"This is the vicar of Christ, I can't stress that enough," she says. "The next thing to Christ on earth is the pope."

With that in mind, Odello says the huge amount of preparation at the mission, which ranges from sprucing up the lush gardens to constructing new altars makes perfect sense.

"Can you imagine if Christ were coming to your house?" she asks. "I'd knock myself out."

AFTER LANDING by helicopter at the ballpark adjacent to the mission at 1 p.m., the pope will be driven to the large courtyard next to the gift shop.

While there will not be any people allowed in that area for security reasons, the pope will surely get a first-hand view of the newly-donated statue of Father Junipero Serra.

The bronze 6-foot tall statue, which has been donated to Carmel by Mara Domecq of Spain, is due to be erected shortly in that courtyard, Odello said.

"He'll be looking as if he's coming back to his beloved mission from one of his trips," says Odello, adding that the statue will be visible from all parts of the courtyard.

From the courtyard, the pope and his entourage will enter the chapel, where he will give a short speech.

About 475 people will be waiting for that moment as the pope enters the stillness of the basilica, says Odello, as she crosses herself.

In readiness for that 10 minutes, mission curator Richard Mann and assistant Nguyen Huu have been preparing a 16-foot tall backdrop, with the pope's coat of arms.

Two months in the making, the gold-leafed gothic piece was first donated to the mission from Mission San Fernando Rey in Southern California.

But with most of the wood dating back to 1575, with large amounts of termite damage, Mann and Huu were forced to construct a new base and molding.

They have also repainted the entire backdrop and replaced all of the gold leafing, plus constructed a blue kneeler for the pope.

In front of the ornate backdrop the pope will sit in a 16th century upholstered Italian chair, Mann says.

"It's an antique chair that's similar to one used by the Holy Father in Rome," says Mann, who will complete that work later in the week.

After blessing the grave of Father Serra, the pope will walk to the quadrangle courtyard, where about 3,000 people will be waiting for his blessing, including 600 children from Junipero Serra School, who will be in bleachers.

While there will be about 20 handicapped people in wheelchairs lined up to see the pope, Odello says the two will only to see each other from afar due to time constraints on the pope.

"He's such a loving person," she says, "If restraints weren't made he would spend all of his time with the people."

•

ODELLO KNOWS from whence she speaks, having viewed the pope two times previously, once in Spain and once in Rome.

"I stood for hours waiting to see him," remembers Odello, referring to Fatima, Spain in 1982. "I stood shoulder to shoulder; I couldn't even rub my nose — I'm serious."

But it was well worth the wait and discomfort, she says.

"I felt the unity of the crowd," says Odello, with a far-off look. "Their belief was like a blanket of love."

So magnetic is the pope, she says, that there was talk by the U.S. Secret Service of closing the archways along the mission's corridor where the pope will make his exit for lunch in the Serra Room. That idea was abandoned.

"There's sort of an electric surge from the people," says Odello, remembering the crush in Spain by 100,000 people. "They're drawn to him."

With her first-hand experience and devout belief in her faith, Odello becomes somewhat exasperated by the sayers of doom on the peninsula.

"People get concerned about logistics," she says. "My comment to that is the pope is going to be on the peninsula for six hours — not six days or six months or six years.

"The peninsula will not be paralyzed, to think the area will be at a standstill is not true," she continues. "We can rise to this momentary inconvenience."

Besides, this may be the one-and-only chance for most people to ever see the pope. And because of Pope John Paul's penchant for travel, which is unusual, people may never get to see any other pope.

"I feel there will never be another pope coming to Carmel again," she says.

Survey on traffic patterns slated to begin Aug. 19

By NANCY HILLS

YOU MAY want to keep track of yourself Aug. 19.

That's the date the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG) and Monterey County Transportation Study will conduct a peninsula-wide travel survey.

The survey is to determine traffic patterns on peninsula roads to better predict and respond to future transportation needs.

The $80,000 study is funded by each community's Local Transportation Fund, according to a press release from Carmel Planning Director Diane White. White is a member of the committee that is conducting the survey.

The public's cooperation is "the key" to the survey's success, White said.

The study will document the origins and destinations of residents and visitors of Pacific Grove, Monterey, Seaside, Carmel, Del Rey Oaks, Sand City and the unincorporated areas surrounding those cities, White wrote.

The three parts of the study include:

• A mailing to 20,000 households on the peninsula — including Carmel — which includes an explanation of the survey and a "trip log" for reporting trips made with family vehicles during the day and night of Wednesday, Aug. 19.

Several trip logs will be mailed so each vehicle or driver will have one to carry around that day. Residents are urged to accurately complete their trip logs and keep their survey forms handy inside their vehicles, the release states.

The mailing will include general questions on household characteristics and the number of vehicles owned. All answers are confidential, explained White.

All data collected will be used to adjust the Caltrans computer model which predicts future travel patterns in order to make predictions of possible areas of bottlenecks more accurate.

• Visitors to the Monterey Peninsula will be surveyed when they arrive at their hotels and motels on Aug. 19. They will be asked to record their trip-making behavior for Aug. 19, the number of people traveling in their party, how they arrived on the peninsula and how likely they would be to use a visitor-oriented transit system.

White said that in Carmel, hotel and motel owners have been very cooperative and have agreed to assist in the program. The survey will be placed in visitors' rooms and desk clerks will ask for the survey at checkout time.

• Vehicles crossing four traffic counting stations will be monitored and a follow-up survey will be mailed to their home asking the specifics of their trip. Vehicles using major entrances to the peninsula will be observed, their license plates recorded and the surveys sent to the vehicle's registration address.

The purpose of this portion of the study is to determine the percentage of visitor and through traffic contributing to local congestion.

"We have traffic counts on streets but we don't know what the make-up of that traffic is," White said.

By determining the type of traffic using the roads and how those roads are used by tourists and residents, the city can better plan its circulation policies and improvements, White said.

SPCA is getting out of 'dog-catching' business

By DAVID LELAND

DURING THE past few years stray animals trottin, along the streets and trails of Carmel Valley have been picked up by the local animal care agency, but due to soaring costs that will change come September.

For the past decade, the Monterey County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has had a pact with the county to pick up strays, but that contract will not be renewed when it expires Aug. 31, according to Jim Bennett, SPCA community relations director.

"We've been losing $300,000 a year doing a government function," Bennett said. "It's the responsibility of the government to control animals."

Under the new animal control program, the county will pick up stray animals under the umbrella of the county department of health.

"The decision to remove the SPCA from the animal control field services has not been an easy one nor was it made in haste," said Rich Ward, SPCA executive director. "It is our position that many stray animals are simply those which have not been turned into us for possible adoption but abandonded to roam our streets."

During the transition period, the SPCA will continue to operate on a month-to-month basis up until March, Bennett said.

He added that the SPCA will continue to assist in picking up wounded or sick animals.

The SPCA will continue to operate its offices located along Highway 68 between Monterey and Salinas, but will concentrate on pet adoption, overpopulation and animal mistreatment, Bennett said.

"We will now be able to spend more time on investigating animal cruelty," he said. "Our business is for the humane care of animals."

Other areas of the county affected by the recent change of guard include the cities of Marina, Greenfield, Soledad and King City.

The city of Carmel will not be affected because it employs its own animal control officer, Valerie Henderson.

While getting out of the animal control business will reduce its officers from eight to three, Bennett said those people may soon get jobs with the county's new animal control division.

Flanders Mansion not bad as it's cracked up to be

By NANCY HILLS

FLANDERS MANSION may have more fighting spirit than previously thought.

The 63-year-old house in Mission Trail Park has been characterized as practically crumbling into dust, held together only by the ivy on its sides and goodwill of those who love it.

However, a re-investigation by two Carmel architects into the walls revealed there is more to the controversial building than meets the eye.

The new look-see was a part of the ongoing evaluation by a city committee formed to determine if there is a viable public use for the structure, sold as is or demolished.

The committees are made up of representatives from the Carmel Recreation and Forestry commissions, the Arboretum Committee and other interested citizens.

The city council set up a fund on Aug. 3 for those who wish to contribute to the investigation into the future of the building and Mission Trail Park.

Built in 1924 by Paul and Grace Flanders, the mansion and its grounds were purchased by the city of Carmel in 1971 and has been the subject of debate ever since.

The house and property are situated in the interior of Mission Trail Park, but because of the potential liability problems, the home has never been used for public events.

The city currently rents rooms and portions of the building to private tenants.

Considering the numerous earth tremors, lack of care, and political winds that have roared around its not-ancient but still respectably time-worn walls.

A reason for its longevity could be a previously-undiscovered reinforcement system that was found when architects Roger Larson and Russell Gifford looked through an opening they made in the mansion's corners.

Apparently, the walls of the building are reinforced using a technique no longer utilized, probably because of the labor necessary in its construction, Larson and Gifford felt.

According to Larson, the reinforcement technique could prove adequate for today's earthquake standards and endows the building with special characteristics that make it uniquely suited for certain types of uses — notably the storage of books and museum-quality materials.

•

PREVIOUS REPORTS indicated that the interior structure of the walls are unreinforced, making it unusable as a public building and which would force the removal of its distinctive tiled roofs.

However, Larson and Gifford, viewing the interior from a different angle, discovered the reinforced walls, which uses an unconventional method of metal ties and solid concrete blocks.

Because the method avoids using solid concrete, which absorbs and retains moisture, the building is dry and could be used for storage of items that require a dry environment and controlled temperatures, Larson said.

"The building looks very good to me," he added.

It does not have one structural crack, Larson said, despite its age and the many earthquakes that have shaken it over the years.

Larson added that a structural engineering calculation should be done to determine whether it meets today's earthquake standards. The committee, he said, has contacted the California State Historical Building Code Board consulting structural engineer, but has not made an appointment for any work to be done.

The calculations would cost about $1,500 to $2,000, Larson estimated.

•

HISTORICALLY, THE building may also be of some note.

Recent research contradicts the opinion that it lacks enough notable lineage to sink money into its restoration.

According to a report by Enid Sales, a member of the Historical Preservation Society and Flanders Committee, it appears the mansion was designed by "prominent San Francisco Bay architect" Henry Higby Gutterson, who worked from 1916 to 1944.

PB fire victims now eligible for SBA loans

VICTIMS OF the Pebble Beach fire can now get much-needed relief from the federal government in the form of low-interest loans of up to $500,000.

The federal Small Business Administration revealed Tuesday that the May 31 fire in the Huckleberry Hill section of Pebble Beach has been deemed a "disaster," paving the way for victims to apply to the agency for low-interest loans.

According to Coe Wilkins, regional public affairs officer for the SBA in San Francisco, a meeting has been set up for 7 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 13 at the Pebble Beach Community Services District offices located at Forest Lodge and Lopez roads in Del Monte Forest. At the meeting will be two SBA disaster loan counselors who will issue applications and answer questions, Wilkins said.

In addition, the counselors will also be available Friday and Saturday, Aug. 14 and 15, and Monday through Wednesday, Aug. 17-19. They will be available at the PBCSD offices from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. each day except Saturday, when they will be on hand from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Wilkins said loans of 4 or 8 percent (depending on available credit elsewhere), will be available to "repair and replace" victims' underinsured or uninsured property: up to $100,000 for physical losses, up to $20,000 for personal losses, and up to $500,000 for business losses. Wilkins said the last item was included because some rental property can be considered a business.

Terms can be available for up to 30 years, he added.

Deadline for filing applications is at the close of business on Oct. 9, 1987. Businesses suffering "economic injury" have until May 10, 1988 to file.

Wilkins said the disaster designation was signed by SBA Administrator James Abdnor in Washington D.C. The regional SBA office received its official request for assistance from the state on July 30 and it immediately sent the request on to Washington, Wilkins said.

"We got it back in seven working days," he said Tuesday. "That's not bad, we did pretty good."

Wilkins added that "technically" the SBA didn't "know" about the fire until they received the state's official request.

"Technically it wasn't until July 30 until we heard about it," he said. "We can't do anything until we hear from them (the state)."

Wilkins said the county board of supervisors made a formal request to the state, which in turn asked the SBA for assistance.

"We found the losses were sufficient and it (fire damage) met the criteria that was necessary," Wilkins said about the disaster designation.

Victims may also obtain information by writing the SBA Disaster Processing Center, PO Box 13795, Sacramento, CA 95853-4795 or by calling toll-free: 1-800-468-1713.

Carmel Timekeepers has the right time for you

MAKE NO mistake about it, if you are unsure what time it is when you enter Carmel Timekeepers in The Barnyard, by the time you leave, you'll have it down to the second.

There's quite a collection on hand at the 2-year-old location, which ranges from antique timepieces to contemporary watches.

The prices also make it available for everybody's pocketbook, with prices starting as low as $17.95 and going up from there, says Susan Holtz, who manages the store for her father Roy, who does the repair work.

Speaking of repair, the family-owned Timekeepers can keep up with anybody when it comes to fixing any type of timepiece.

"If you have a mantle clock that hasn't chimed right for the last couple of years, bring it in," says the younger Holtz.

Roy Holtz has been repairing timepieces on the peninsula for 33 years, and formally worked at Ford's Department Store before opening his own shop.

The Timekeepers also has a wide selection of watches and watch bands, as well as providing free estimates for any repair work that needs to be done.

And as an added delight, the Timekeepers also carries a select number of "retro" pocket and wristwatches, or those from the 1930s.

Carmel Lifestyles caters to players and fans alike

IF YOU'RE desiring to know the difference — which there is — between sportswear and activewear, your best bet is Carmel Lifestyles in The Barnyard.

Just so you're not left in suspense, sportswear is mainly used when participating in sporting events, while activewear leans more toward fashion.

"You're not really participating in the sport, but you want to look the part," says Lifestyles owner Tom Lawler, who opened the store one month ago. The couple still operates the Red Rooster, which they have for 10 years.

Lifestyles caters to both men and women, offering a wide variety of aerobics wear, jackets, fleece wear and shoes.

"A lot of it is mixing and matching colors," explains Lawler. "You're coordinating outfits."

Lawler says Lifestyles also offers La Gear shoes, which are made in an athletic style but are offered in a myriad of colors.

"You can get colors to match your outfit," he says.

Combine the vast selection of activewear with the full service, which includes polite salespeople, free parking and free gift wrapping and it spells winner.

"We're trying to get it all together in one store so it's convenient," says Lawler.

Lawler adds that Lifestyles will also order certain special sizes for its customers.

CARMEL LIFESTYLES owners Tom and Paula Lawler like to point out that activewear and sportswear are not the same. For people interested in looking good, while not necessarily taking part in sports, Lifestyles is the smart place to shop. (Holly McFarland photo.)

AT THE Irish Crystal Co. in The Barnyard, shoppers can buy imitation Waterford crystal at savings of up to 50 percent. Co-owner Sara Marcy says the store is fully stocked so delivery is immediate. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Get Waterford quality, but not the high cost

NOT ONLY is imitation often the highest form of flattery, but it's also often the smartest way to shop. Take, for example, the Irish Crystal Co. in The Barnyard.

There, shoppers can buy Waterford-type crystal for as much as 50 percent below that of the famous glassware maker's price.

"It's (Irish Crystal) is a virtual clone of Waterford," says Steve Marcy, who with his wife Sara opened the crystal store a month ago. "It has the same quality, but the prices are different."

Take the classic Ships Decantor pattern, which Waterford sells for $237 — Irish Crystal sells this gem for only $160.

Marcy says the reason the prices are so low is because he is a distributor for the glassware and gets the pieces direct from the factory.

"It's the same formula, the same material and the same process (as Waterford)," says the former high-tech electronics president. "But we buy direct from the factory so we don't have to mark it up."

Marcy added that soon he will open stores in Fresno and Sacramento.

Customers at Irish Crystal have more than 3,000 works of art to choose from, with no wait after purchase.

"We carry a complete inventory of our product," says Marcy. "So delivery is immediate."

Irish Crystal also offers custom glasswork, bridal registration and engraving of corporate gifts.

The best of both worlds can be yours at Robata's

COMBINING LOCAL delicacies to come up with traditional Japanese cooking, Robata's in The Barnyard provides some of the most delicious food on the peninsula.

How, you may ask, do the two fit together? The answer is quite nicely, thank you.

For example, you could try the Castroville Ten tempura dish. Using the rich tempura batter, Robata's deep fries artichoke hearts and mushrooms, direct from Castroville — about 20 miles north.

That's not to say you can't get more traditional Japanese items at Robata's — would you believe Nikumaki?

Nikumaki is thin slices of tender filet of beef wrapped around green onion, which is then charbroiled to perfection. The masterpiece is then brushed lightly with teriyaki sauce.

Even the sushi at Robata's is unique. The Robata Roll combines tuna, avocado, rice and seaweed, which is sprinkled with flying fish roe.

But if you're not sure how much you want to eat, you could order from the restaurant's extensive list of appetizers.

"We have a long list (20) of appetizers," says Tina Fukumoto, who owns Robata's with husand Kenny. "You can order separately and make a meal out of dining on that."

Fukumoto says the eatery also offers a full bar, featuring Mandarin Orange daiquiris, sake, and imported beers.

Robata's is open daily from 5 to 11 p.m. and Sunday 4:30 to 10:30 p.m. and is located at 3658 in The Barnyard. Phone 624-2643.

Reid Gallery marches to beat of different drummer

FIRST YOU take an unusual collection of fine art pieces, then sprinkle in some unique jewelry and top that off with a fabulous crystal collection and you've probably got a pretty good idea what goes on at Reid Gallery in The Barnyard.

Not only is the gallery noted for its wide range of pieces, but it is also marching to the beat of a different drummer in Carmel.

"We have one of the most eclectic collections of fine art you will find anyplace," says Ron Reid, who also owns two art galleries in Washington state. "We're out of step with the norms of Carmel."

Take, for example, the recent showing of crystal specimens, which varies greatly from the traditional seascapes shown in local galleries.

"It was a tremendous collection of stuff," explains Reid, "but this is nature's sculptural comment."

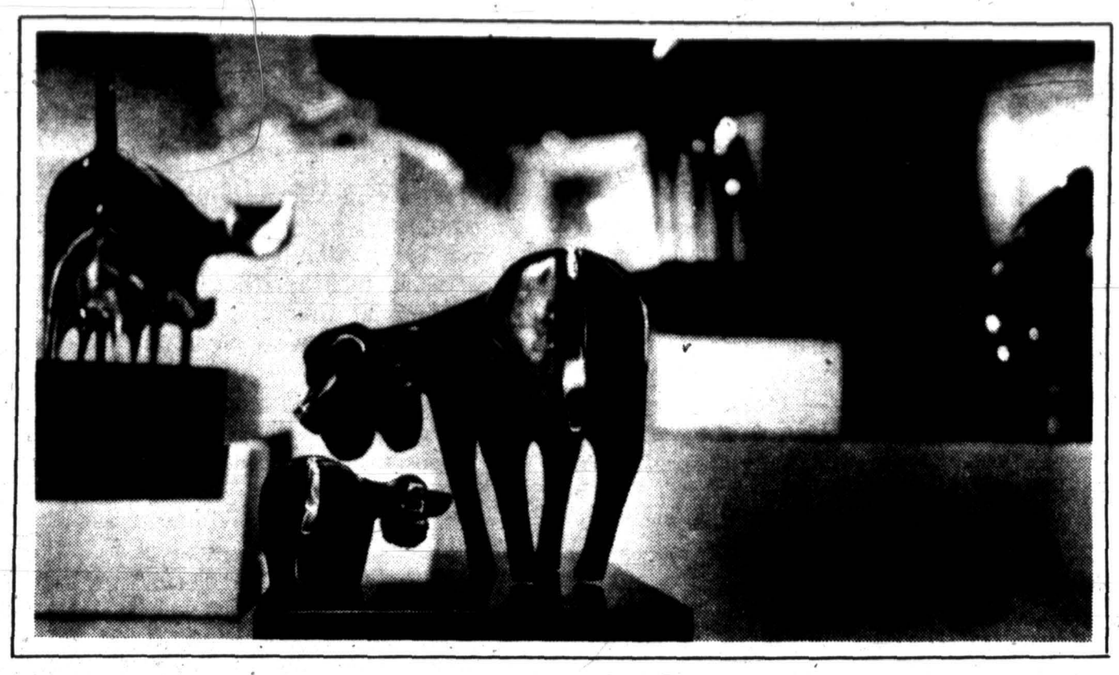
Reid boasts that his store is also the only gallery in Central California that is currently displaying works by Erte, the "top-selling artist in the world." Reid calls him the "father of art deco."

Available for inspection are Erte's limited edition jewelry collection, bronze sculptures and ferigraphs, which are similar to lithographs done on silkscreen.

Also on display are limited editions by Yamaga, Michael Parkes, Susan Rios, Doug Webb and Thomas McKnight, to name a few.

Reid says the gallery also features textile art and stained glass work — it's definitely an experience visiting the Reid Gallery.

"People come in here and they have a great time," says Reid.



DISPLAYING "NEW Age" types of art, the Crossing Point Art Gallery in The Barnyard attempts to meld body, mind and spirit in its selections. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Crossing Point Gallery joins mind, body, spirit

JUST LISTENING to the owner of the Crossing Point Art Gallery in The Barnyard describe the style of art displayed in his store evokes a peaceful feeling.

Mark Waldroup says he wants his gallery to represent something a little different.

"We want to be known as the only New Age gallery in Carmel," he says.

As Waldroup describes his vision, the picture becomes clearer.

"New Age is part of a consciousness," he explains. "It's the world beyond war — a win-win type of consciousness."

Call it a union of mind, body and spirit.

For the past several months, the Crossing Point has been presenting a one-man show by Polish artist Lezk Forczek called "Illuminism."

Forczek uses 200 to 300 separate layers of water colors in the 25 works on display. That style of painting provides a prism-like effect.

And while Waldroup will continue to feature Forczek during the next few months, he will also begin to work with new artists, who will continue his visionary state.

Waldroup has been searching for new artists nationwide and has a new show scheduled to begin in three weeks featuring an artist from Washington. He declined to name the artist.

"You will just have to wait," he says.

The store will also begin carrying crystal jewelry, tapestries and glasswork.

Shop for Pappagallo captures that classic look

CLASSIC BUT casual, that elusive look which is the trademark of a woman with style, is much easier to admire than obtain. Unless, of course, you can find a special store where the look is synonymous with the merchandise.

Shop for Pappagallo, on the lower level of The Barnyard and directly underneath the Thunderbird Bookstore, can end the search for that perfect shop. The right look is easily created from its wide selection of the famous Pappagallo shoes and carefully choosen separates and accessories.

Owners Jill Leach and Annette Alcocer, mother and daughter, have been outfitting peninsula women since The Barnyard opened 12 years ago. They and their trained staff know just how to pull it all together for their customers.

With 10 to 12 different labels — including a new line of Sperry Topsider Sportswear and other lines such as Calliope, Corbin and Gieger — the shop offers a wide selection of designer jeans, skirts, pants, blouses and sweaters.

Sweaters are a specialty, Alcocer said, especially novelty sweaters with unusual designs and styles.

Put together with a one of their Mary Ann Rosenthal canvas and leather handbags, Ralph Lauren accessories and an excellent variety of neckwear and pins, the look is assured of success. Of course, that's just a taste of what's available.

To underscore the entire outfit is the nationally-known Pappagallo shoes, known for their comfort and wonderful choice of colors. Styles range from a bop-around sneaker, casual loafer to a choice of sophisticated, low-heeled pumps.

Just for fun, Shop for Pappagallo offers a variety fo gift items like print and solid socks, Ginnie Johansen perfume, quilted handbags and matching accessories.

McFarland seawall EIR is now available for public comments

THE MCFARLAND Seawall environmental impact report is ready and available for public comment.

Comments must be submitted to the city by Aug. 26, according to the planning department. Copies are available at the planning department or Harrison Memorial Library.

It will be reviewed and possibly acted upon by the planning commission sometime in September.

The report, compiled by EIP Associates of San Francisco, reviews proposed foundation repairs and esthetic alterations to a private seawall on the northern cliffs of Carmel Beach, next to Pescadero Creek. The report includes three alternatives to the proposed repairs.

The wall was built by Craig McFarland after the storms of 1983 to protect a home he owns on top of the bluff. It has been the subject of controversy since its construction.

The report states that some kind of seawall or support system is needed to protect the McFarland home.

The 220-feet long and 14 to 25-feet high wall consists of stacked colored cement-filled sandbags with steel reinforcing bars.

An investigation conducted after the wall was built found that the northern 80 feet rests on sand and gravel rather than a solid surface. The lack of a solid foundation could lead to the collapse of that portion of the wall.

To repair the wall's unstable portion its designers, Bestor Engineers, suggested burying 2 and 3-ton rocks — loose rip-rap — in the sand below the base of the wall. The rocks would press against the sand and gravel underneath, holding it in place.

During planning commission review of the proposed repairs, public objections to the repairs included:

• The rock would move seaward and cut off access to the northern end of the beach. It could also prove to be esthetically displeasing.

• That the rock could move out during a storm and the sand underneath would liquify, causing the wall to collapse.

• The rock would change wave patterns, further eroding adjacent cliffs.

The proposed rip-rap would cost about $30,000 to $40,000, the report states.

The EIR, addressing some of the concerns, suggests modifications of Bestor's proposal. Those modifications, or alternatives, include:

• Using the same rip-rap concept, but placing it on a horizontal "apron" of smaller rock with a filter fabric underneath to allow water to seep through.

Because the rock would be placed on a horizontal surface, its movement would be less, explained Scott Noble, of Noble Coastal and Harbor Engineering. Noble's firm was hired by EIP to help prepare the report.

That lessens the possibility of the wall collapsing if the rocks migrate away from the sand under the wall.

The apron would also minimize the rocks sinking, the report states.

The rip-rap rock would extend 15 to 20 feet out from the wall and should be covered by sand during the summer months. During the winter months, when much of the sand migrates out to sea, portions of the rock will be exposed.

The apron, the report states, will also direct water in a horizontal direction rather than a vertical direction. The vertical movement of water increases erosion of the beach.

The rip-rap would require less maintenance with this alternative than the proposed repairs.

The cost of this alternative is estimated to be $30,000 to $40,000.

• Utilize the apron foundation as above and reduce the height of the wall by 5 feet.

Lowering the wall by 5 feet, the report states, would improve its the stability by removing some of the weight. It would also improve the appearance and allow the bluff to retain more of its natural shape.

However, this alternative would be costly — about an additional $70,000 to the $30,000 to $40,000 price tag.

• Rather than using rip-rap to shore up the foundation, put steel sheet piles (basically a steel wall) in front of the sand underneath the wall. The sheet piles, which would have to be grounded in the underlying sandstone, would hold the sand in much as the proposed rip-rap. Rock or concrete would be placed between the steel sheet piles and the sand beneath the wall.

This alternative, the report states, would use the least amount of beach area (2 feet) but when exposed would increase wave reflection and beach "scour" slightly because of its flat surface.

The report adds that it would have a minimal impact on beach scour, however, because it would be buried most of the time and when exposed would be so for only a "short height."

The main problem with this alternative, the report adds, is the unknown quality of the sandstone and possibility of securely embedding the sheet wall.

The cost for this alternative is estimated at $40,000 to $50,000.

Proposed county ordinance could impact ambulances

By DAVID LELAND

CARMEL OFFICIALS are keeping a close eye on a proposed ordinance which would regulate the county's emergency medical services and, if adopted, could also reshape the city's longstanding ambulance policy.

At hand is an ordinance written by the county department of emergency services which asks that both incorporated and unincorporated areas of Monterey County go into partnership with that agency.

The county made the first step toward that goal recently when it told the city of Salinas that it would be using the A-1 Ambulance Service instead of its fire department in its lifesaving efforts.

Salinas has balked at that proposal and instead wants to train its firemen for emergency services and license them with the county.

"We believe we can upgrade our service," said David Kennedy, Salinas city attorney. He added that the fire department already has trained 12 firemen, who only need to be certified with the county.

Under that plan Salinas would place a trained paramedic in each fire station. That, he said, would increase the response time in emergency situations.

He added that it takes a private care provider eight minutes to respond to a call, while the fire department can be there in only four minutes.

But the county, after working on such a proposal for three years, has no intention of giving up.

"We need to have a countywide coordinated system," said Kim Donnelly, EMS coordinator. "I saw this (ordinance) as the mechanism for putting that in writing."

While the county initially was ready to file a lawsuit against Salinas in order to get compliance, that idea has been put on the back burner while both sides try to reach a happy medium through a series of workshops, Kennedy said.

That proposed ordinance has also drawn sharp criticism from peninsula cities, who are not in the habit of taking policy direction from the county.

Call it a war of jurisdictions.

According to Carmel City Atty. Don Freeman, it is highly unusual — if not unheard of — for a county to exert itself over a city.

But the county maintains that under the state health and safety code its sphere of influence is expanded.

•

IN CARMEL, Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo has launched a campaign to keep as status quo the 50-year agreement with the local chapter of the Red Cross, which calls for free ambulance service in case of emergency.

"Nothing should happen to that free ambulance service," Laiolo said, adding that's what she expects to change if the ordinance is passed by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors this fall.

The Red Cross also offers free service in Big Sur and Carmel Valley.

Laiolo and Bill Hill, assistant fire chief, have been attending workshops offered by the county in an attempt to achieve some unity between the two sides.

"Our interests are, are they establishing a precedent?" Hill said. "That's why we're not sitting quietly."

Hill added that the going price for a trip to the hospital in a privately-contracted ambulance runs about $270 plus $7 a mile.

Moreover, with the Red Cross ambulance parked at the Carmel Fire Station it only takes 1½ minutes to cover Carmel and three minutes to get to the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, Freeman said. That time would be bound to increase if the ambulance was based out of town.

There is some speculation that Salinas will file its own lawsuit against the county, Hill said, but Carmel is not ready to jump into that fracas.

"There's a lot of sentiment to leave it the way it is," he said. "(But) we are interested observers right now."

The county says its position regarding Carmel is that residents should not worry.

"There's a certain amount of perception that things will change in Carmel," Donnelly said. "Nothing will change."

Donnelly added that the Red Cross would simply have to sign an agreement with the county to continue its services. Up until now that pact has not been in writing.

The only change in Carmel could occur if the Red Cross decides it no longer wants to render services to the city, Donnelly said.

Under recent state legislation, there would have to be competitive bidding if Carmel changed its provider, she said. But even then the city would still have some say in the matter.

"We want the political jurisdictions to have a voice in the provider," Donnelly said.

Blood drive scheduled for The Crossroads

THE RED Cross/Community Hospital will conduct a blood drive at The Crossroads Shopping Center in the Community Room Thursday, Aug. 20 from 11 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Sandwiches and beverages will be served. More than 50 commercial, industrial and retail business establishments located in The Barnyard, Carmel Rancho Shopping Center and The Crossroads will encourage their employees to participate.

The general public is invited to attend, be tested and donate blood to help save lives.

DOLLARS & SENSE

By Anthony Piazza & Marshall Bloom

Wiseman Ralph

WE'LL CALL him Ralph. He's been a businessman on the peninsula for several decades. And since he's been in or around the hospitality business for most of that time, he's well known by a majority of the businessmen in our area. From Cannery Row to the Village in Carmel Valley, local proprietors call Ralph when they want some common sense advice.

He's a straight shooter, unpretentious and reliable, an admirable fellow on all counts.

Now why, you ask, do we mention this fine example of business rectitude if we're not even bothering to mention him by name?

Quite simple. We want to open Ralph's personal portfolio to discuss one of his favorite investments. And we'd like you to pay attention to how he invests, not who he is.

Ralph is conservative and cautious. He can count the bad investments (in real property or securities) that he's ever made on the fingers of one hand. And the very few that he's made are still painful for him to relate, even though many years have passed since the dollars were lost.

He arrived in our offices one day with a large sum of money to invest.

"I want something tax-free, safe and liquid," he said when we got down to business.

We took a stab at one of his requirements.

"How important is the liquidity, Ralph? Do you need any of this money in the forseeable future?"

"Not really."

"Then it should be safe to say liquidity is less important than safety and tax free income?"

"You could say that."

"How important is safety?"

"If it's not safe, I don't want to know about it."

"Would you sacrifice some income yield for safety?"

"As I said, if it's not safe..."

"Okay, we understand. It sounds like you want an insured unit trust."

"How does that work?"

"You'll be buying into a fixed portfolio of California bonds. Your income, slightly higher than 7 percent will be totally tax free. The key word here is fixed. The portfolio will not change for the life of the investment. At maturity each of the bonds will be paid off and your money will be returned. Also, the entire portfolio will be insured."

"Wouldn't a mutual fund invested in California bonds be just as good?"

"Ralph, you're a unit trust man, not a mutual fund investor."

"What's the difference between a unit trust and a mutual fund?"

"A unit trust is composed of an unchanging portfolio, everything is known. A mutual fund is constantly being traded. A unit trust is effectively more conservative than a mutual fund.

"All you have to accept is that a unit trust should be bought and held, not traded in prior to maturity. It's definitely best as a long-term commitment."

In short, Ralph bought the trust, not once but three times, each with separate chunks of cash.

He invested wisely because he was perfectly clear in his own mind about what he wanted in an investment.

Did the investment make him rich?

Absolutely not. Getting rich was not his intention.

What are your intentions these days? Getting rich? Or meeting specific investment goals?

EDITORIAL: A NEW KIND OF POLITICS

The government is functioning along very popular lines when it takes up the problems of the home. An announcement of unusual significance to both farm and city women has been made by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to the effect that steps will be taken shortly to "strengthen the scientific work of the Department as it may be related to home economics."

In this home economics work a great deal of attention has been given to studies of foods and how best to use them, labor-saving devices for the home, studies of dressmaking and materials, etc. While work of this sort is planned primarily for the help of women on the farms, much of it is equally helpful to women in the cities, and especially to those in moderate cities, and especially to those in moderate circumstances who must exercise economy and get the greatest value for the money spent.

HAVE WE A BUILDING CODE?

Has or has not Carmel a building code? These questions arose this week in the process of sifting recent acts of the city attorney and draw up its own ordinances.

The council carelessly and hastily rewrote the ordinance adopting the Pacific Uniform Building Code after it had passed second reading. It substituted an "emergency" clause for the 30-day clause which would have allowed time for minor corrections. It changed the penalty clause in the ordinance, but not the penalty clause in the code. Therefore two penalties are prescribed for violation of the building code, and this irregularity possibly invalidates the whole thing.

EDITORS WINDOW: PINE NEEDLE

There is a merchant who has taken to parking his bright blue station wagon on Ocean Avenue on Sundays. The truck bears an unblushing, two-foot high legend bannering the name of his business and its location, two blocks removed from the tourist-thronged thoroughfare.

Whether this gentleman is a victim of the parking problem, or merely unfortunately misguided zeal, it is not impossible that if he persists he may stir up a storm of resentment among merchant and citizen alike.

CITY PONDERS FATE OF MONUMENT

Following a spectacular crash early Saturday morning that shattered Carmel's World War I monument at Ocean and San Carlos, the city staff is still trying to figure out just who will restore the monument and who will pay the restoration costs.

The monument to Carmel's World I dead was toppled at 7:40 a.m. when a car lost its brakes near Ocean and Junipero, according to police reports.

The memorial arch's history began when the Carmel American Legion spurred a campaign to raise funds for a World War I memorial. Funds were raised by private organizations, dances, parties and a vaudeville show during a year long campaign conducted bythe Pine Cone.

The memorial arch was designed in 1921 by Charles Sumner Greene, who was honored by the American Institute of Architects. As a gift to Carmel, Greene donated the design and supervised the construction of the arch by the mason he chose. Each stone is handhewn and chiseled. The cornerstone was laid on November 11, 1921.

CARMEL DISCUSSES BUT FAILS TO CREATE CITY RECREATION PROGRAM FOR ALL AGES

Carmel has a thriving cultural center, an excellent but cramped public library, valuable downtown park properties, and the services of well-financed forestry and police departments.

But it has no recreation program for its citizens, although the idea has been discussed — fruitlessly — for years. The city will once again resume discussion of this long-dormant issue "probably later this year," in the words of City Administrator Douglas Peterson.

"We've talked about it in the past — providing some kind of recreation program for all ages," Peterson said. "There's nothing active on this right now. The city will talk about it; it's an annual event. Probably later this year."

Advisory committee for Cachagua area to meet Aug. 17

THE CACHAGUA Area Plan Citizens Advisory Committee will meet Aug. 17 to discuss support for dams on the Carmel and Arroyo Seco rivers, a community park, and development issues in the area.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Monday, Aug. 17 at the Cachagua Volunteer Fire Co. Building at Princes Camp.

Also on the agenda will be discussion of National Forest issues, transportation, agriculture, and visual sensitivity.

Celebrating 60

WHEN AN art association celebrates a 60th birthday the baby pictures turn out to be paintings by the famous artists who founded the group. Armin Hansen, for instance, was the first president of the Carmel Art Association back in 1927 when it was born.

A tribute to the founding members of the first 10 years was the theme of the anniversary party Saturday evening and the largest gallery was filled with their paintings (many drawn from private collections).

Present-day members were there to greet the many guests who attended. In fact, Pacific Grove artist (and member) Edward Ward said he thought the party was given in celebration of his latest sale. Edwin Meese III purchased his 30-by-40 oil painting of Moss Landing and it is now on its way to China as a gift in the new people-to-people exchange program. Congratulations, Edward!

The bountiful food tables were due to the efforts of artists Shirley Holt (Pacific Grove) hospitality chairwoman. Others helping with the celebration party were Brenda Morrison, Gael Donovan, Margaret Roberts, Will Bullas and Bill Hannun. Brenda Morrison and the association board presented a card of appreciation to their director Gael Donovan.

BUD'S PUB BANQUET WINNER

Bud's Pub was bulging at the seams during the cocktail hour last Saturday evening. Ann Marie Rivers and 25 friends and family members were having a grand evening out on the town of Carmel.

"I just couldn't believe it," said Ann Marie (of Long Beach), "when they called and told me I was winner of the Bud's Pub contest." (Bud Allen is away in London gallavanting and having fun.)

First, cocktails for all at (where else?) Bud's Pub, then on to a banquet dinner in the Garden Room of La Playa Hotel. "I can't wait to go to dinner, I have never been in La Playa Hotel," Ann Marie said in a soft southern accent.

"FRIENDS OF THE CHILDREN" DRESSAGE LUNCHEON

The Friends of the Children, an auxiliary of Family Resource Center, and Honorary Chairman Dr. Shreve Archer gave an elegant luncheon on Sunday at the 41st Annual Dressage Show and Flower Exhibition. Tables with striking floral arrangements (courtesy of Flowers Unlimited) were set up just ouside the blue-and-white tent at the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center. The tent held the gourmet buffet and an extravaganza of orchids (courtesy of The Orchid Garden, Carmel Valley).

Luncheon chairpersons, were Karla Ambler and Diane Conrad and all food and wines were donated so that "Friends" received all profits. As a treat for the luncheon crowd there was a parade of seven award-winning stallions. Each rider was awarded a bottle of Monterey Vineyard champagne by Vickey Gott.

Dressage show manager was Fran Giacomini and her co-chair was Bea di Grazia. Committee members were Edith Lord, Dominique LeGrand-List and Gretchen Bock, who unfortunately was away in Colorado. On the general committee were Derek di Grazia, Deborah di Grazia, Jean-Philippe Giacomini and Clair Jacobson.

The show was so successful this year that competition began a day early and even so, more applications were received than could be accommodated.

'Tis the season for the horsey set — horse shows, polo matches, dressage and so forth. It seems the appropriate time to bring you an interview with one of the outstanding horsemen in the world today — Jean-Philippe Giacomini. He and his wife, Fran, were hosts recently to another world-famous trainer and rider, Capt. Mark Phillips of England and husband of her Royal Highness Princess Anne.

JEAN-PHILIPPE — LOVER OF HORSES

When you talk to Jean-Philippe Giacomini you automatically talk about horses. Not that he isn't interested in other things — friends, languages, travel, imports, business, etc., but horses are and always have been his consuming passion. He has an impressive background in teaching and training in equestrian sports: dressage, jumping, and three-day event competitions.

Why did you decide to move to the Monterey Peninsula?

"We could put it the other way, 'why didn't we move here earlier?' We had come from England to the East Coast many times, but the big problem there is that you have to move the horses with the seasons. For instance winters are impossible and summers are not great either. Horses have to be transported to Florida for those seasons.

"Then Derek and Bea di Grazia (directors of the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center), moved here, I knew them both well, we came out to the Pebble Beach show and came back to spend the month of August in 1985. There was no reason to go anywhere else so we came back in November and stayed.

"The climate here is wonderful because it is cool — that makes a lot of difference with the horses. We had gone to Santa Ynez but it is so deserted you never see anyone there, whereas here, you just have to sit on the lawn in Pebble Beach and you meet the whole world."

Is your business here now?

"No. Our original business is making custom saddles and our factory is in England. The suppliers, the people who know how to do it are there. It doesn't make sense to try to make them anywhere else. We've made very good saddles for top riders for 10 years and I have had at least 20 clients in the Olympics using our saddles.

"Besides that, I have designed a lot of other products for horses. Some of those are made here and exported to Europe. As far as possible, we try to make it an even balance. I still do quite a bit of consultancy as well."

Did you grow up in England?

"No, I grew up in Paris — or close to Paris. I went to school one year in Germany, lived five years in Portugal, then in Spain, and moved to England in 1978. Home is wherever I am.

"I went to France to Portugal to study riding there. Portugal had a revolution in 1974 and I stayed on another year after that. The majority of the people in riding were on the wrong side politically during the revolution and my students had to hide and keep very quiet. My problem was getting the horses out and I did it on the pretense of doing a show in Spain.

"Some members of the British team asked me to go there to train horses and those sessions went so well, that I moved there in '78 and taught people on the British three-day team from '78 to '83.

"Three-day eventing is a very exciting sport. I had done it when I was much younger, built courses, and always had a bit to do with it. It is THE English equestrian sport and it was a very good situation for me to learn from them. I taught them what I knew and then I learned everything else on the sport I could.

"I was teaching, doing clinics, going to international shows. You start to go to more and more places, so it is a crazy life. The advantage was that they were difficult people to please. We had to be very good at what we were doing. You can't fool people who have been riding in the Olympics five times. In the European system a good teacher teaches the horse, then teaches young riders to ride and to learn from the horse — that is how he learned. I was lucky enough to learn riding this way — to ride a horse who passed his knowledge on to me.

"Here in America teaching is done through a clinic. It is a big deal for those who go because they go only once every six months or a year and invest a lot of money, time and emotion into it. They give you a lot of attention and they demand a lot — and they entertain you to death. They don't want you to be bored for one second while the only thing you want to do is collapse, have a sandwich and watch TV. When those people put you into a plane the last day, someone else is picking you up in another city and you start another three days of exactly the same. Again, and again, and again.

"Mark (Capt. Phillips) does the same thing. When he left here after three tiring days he went to Canada (he snapped his fingers) again, again, and again.

"When you are training international riders you are a coach, a nanny, a mother, a nurse, you are everything including finding sponsors for all the money they spend. And it's a lot. If anything it is a very expensive sport. When I came to it, it was still amateur. In a small way I was instrumental in starting sponsorships. I started getting manufacturers to supply the teams like they do in skiing. All other sports are way ahead of riding. Now in England everybody has a sponsor. You look at an English three-day event and it is like looking at the Yellow Pages.

"Training is a very stressful business. I decided to take a bit of a break. I love what I am doing now. I always loved teaching. In fact, I stopped it precisely because I wanted to keep loving it. It was getting to the point where I was teaching 12 to 14 hours a day.

"My saddle business just sort of came along all by itself as a service to my students. I was very attentive to this item. I set out to make the best design, to do something that really influences my people positively, to change the way people ride. Just as chairs seat you differently, there is that much difference in saddles. A saddle is made by a saddler who doens't know how to ride and used by arider who doesn't know how to make a saddle.

"I had a good saddle to start with, and when I started to copy it I wanted to improve it. Every week for weeks and weeks we made another saddle and another saddle, improving all the time. It has been 10 years and I am still changing them to be more accurate, more effective, more responsive to what people need.

"They asked me to go to England because I was a European dressage expert, then when I got there I learned more from the English than I taught them. The English are extremely good at horse care as well as the world's best at eventing. While I was teaching I soaked in everything else.

"It took me a long time to find my feet and to understand how America works. When I move somewhere I do what I am good at and then I look around and learn what they are going to teach me. This country is the country of business, there is no question about it. It is a bit of a culture shock, especially California."

Our interview (held in Mr. Giacomini's Pacific Grove home) was pleasantly delayed a few moments by the appearance of his daughter, 1-year-old Colomba (it means dove) brought in from her afternoon nap by her mother, Fran. Colomba, who has been riding since she was 3 weeks old and has her own horse, seemed very happy about life in general.

ONLY A part of the 25 guests of Ann Marie Rivers (sixth from right), who won a dinner at La Playa with all her friends (or at least 25 of them), through Bud's Pub. Next to Ann Marie was Julia Felin, who celebrated a birthday that day.

"I still do some teaching in Pebble Beach," Jean-Philippe continued, "and have people coming here from various parts of California. I travel a little bit to do horse clinics — I keep my favorite ones going."

Do you ride in competition?

"Yes. However, when I was teaching actively I could not compete because you have to devote yourself to your students. I competed in the early '70s in France, and I have started again in California. I have two horses — Okzident, who was last year's West Coast champion and another called Orient.

Fire-safe hunting practices

The coastal Zone A deer season opens August the 8th.

The U.S. Forest Service, California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection, and the Bureau of Land Management would like to remind hunters to use caution while hunting and camping in the wildlands of Monterey and San Benito counties.

California is presently experiencing an unusual summer drought which has resulted in critical fire danger. High temperatures, low humidities and dry fuels have made an explosive and potentially disastrous situation.

Here are some hints for a fire-safe hunting season:

On private and BLM lands, you must have a permit to build a campfire. Please remember to have a 10-foot clearance around all fires. Have water and a shovel available. Put your fires out: dead out, before leaving.

The Monterey Ranger District of the Los Padres National Forest is presently under Stage II Fire Restrictions. No fires of any type, including gas stoves, are allowed except in developed campgrounds. Camping is restricted to developed and designated sites only. Please check with the District office in King City at (408) 385-5434 for further information.

If you are using military surplus ammunition, be sure you do not have any tracer ammunition. This ammunition is of an incendiary nature, and it is illegal to possess it.

A common fire starter is vehicle exhaust systems coming into contact with the dry vegetation. To prevent this, stay on the roads and park in cleared areas only. If you smoke, do so only in areas cleared to mineral soil or in your vehicle. Use your ashtray and crush all cigarette butts.

You don't have to be an American to die of a heart attack.

You also don't have to overeat. Or consume excessive amounts of cholesterol. Or ignore high blood pressure. Or smoke. But that's what a large segment of this country's population does. And that's one reason the United States has the highest incidence of heart attack in the world. At the American Heart Association, we're trying to help Americans change the way they live. And die.

Okzident (a German horse — thus the name), is going up through his levels now and I hope to take him to Europe next year. You see, a horse takes three to four years to be ready for serious international competition. He has been trained two and half years and we will try to have a shot at the Olympics.

"I try to keep variety in what I do, but everything I do has one common line — to improve my understanding of horses, to improve the conditions of riding for other people. I've watched other sports — I am familiar with skiing. I remember my father's methods and equipment and I have seen skiing come out of the prehistoric ages. Now, they have wonderful boots that almost do the whole thing themselves. People who have skied for three weeks look good and enjoy themselves. I think that is the way it should be.

"My latest product is a subliminal tape on riding. It will be on confidence-boosting, on relaxation, on better relationship with the horse, to get over the basic fear and to get over the bad teaching that most beginners get when they start riding.

"I am very excited about that project after having worked on the physical balance of people through developing the saddle and now I want to work on their minds.

"Because of the posture our saddle gives, a good riding posture guarantees a good standing posture. I've checked with chiropractors and physical therapists for saddle stress and points in riding position. The posture our saddles produce seems to be correct. People come to us with back problems and by sitting better in the saddle they end up having their backs working better.

"The international milieu of dressage is very friendly and, unlike the popular belief, dressage riders are not snobs. The very professional horse people are the least snobbish of any group I have ever known. They are all aware that a horse can make a fool of you any day and that keeps you humble.

"We all share a sport that is slightly dangerous (especially to the ego), and we root for each other. We all get hurt, we all get a day of glory. Princess Anne or Dr. Klinke, royal or not, if they get thrown they get dusty like everyone else.

"When we travel we stay with friends in their homes and they do the same. We had our place filled for this dressage show last week.

"Pebble Beach is the place closest to Portugal. It reminds me of The Lisbon Country Club where I use to keep my horses.

"We love living here."

JEAN-PHILIPPE Giacomini with one of his famous custom-made saddles, which are built in England.

Roxanna Lee, Carmel Yamaha music teacher, was installed as a director of the Music Teachers' Association of California State Board July 5 at the Red Lion Inn in San Jose, during the association's 77th annual convention.

Lee, owner of the Carmel Yamaha Music School located at Sunset Cultural Center, has been a member of the association since 1969, and a member of the Monterey County Branch of the MTAC since 1971.

LOCAL ROTARIAN DOANTES FUNDS TO HOSPICE

The local chapter of the Carmel Rotary Club recently awarded fellow member Barney Laiolo of Carmel the 1987 J.O. Handley award. Laiolo was recognized for his many hours of service to the community, and received a check for $1,000 to be donated to the charity of his choice. Laiolo chose Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

Laiolo served three terms as mayor of Carmel from 1968-72 and 1980-82. He is past chairman of the local Red Cross chapter and more recently chairman for the Red Cross disaster relief and blood bank services. Laiolo has been a member of the Carmel Rotary Club for 23 years.

Laiolo says the J.O. Handley award was a fund set up by the former Rotarian to be distributed for the benefit of the local community. He says he wanted to put the money toward a good community cause. " I chose Hospice because I believe in what they're doing and I know they do a good job," he said.

Charles B. Kramer

Private family services took place June 15 for Charles Bradley Kramer of Pebble Beach, a retired industrialist, who died June 11 at his home. He was 80.

Born Jan. 1, 1907 in Monroe, La., he graduated from the University of Michigan in 1928 and was a member of Zeta Psi fraternity. During World War II, his manufacturing companies made aircraft parts and armaments. After the war, the companies specialized in parts and steel items for agriculture and industry.

He retired before the age of 50 and moved to Pebble Beach in 1959. In 1962 he married Jane Dearing of Fresno. The Kramers built a home overlooking Stillwater Cove in 1963.

He was co-chairman of the Citizens for Clean Air, the group which successfully persuaded Humble Oil Co. to select Benicia, rather than Moss Landing, as a site for a refinery in 1965, and served two years as a member of the Monterey County Planning Commission. He was chairman of the Central Coast Regional Commission, established by Proposition 20 in 1972.

He was a trustee of the Monterey Institute of International Studies and a founder and director of the Naval Postgraduate School Foundation; a director of the Del Monte Forest Foundation; and was active in Republican politics.

He was president of the Del Monte Forest Property Owners Association and was a member of the Del Monte Forest Citizens Advisory Committee; was a former president of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, and served as a vice chairman of admissions for the U.S. Open Golf Championship in 1972 and the Professional Golfers Association Championship in 1977, both played at the Pebble Beach Golf Links.

PROPHECY CORNER

By Phil Lunsford

Signs of times Part III

Last week's article explained that there would be a 10-nation entity that would be in power over the world during the tribulation. The 10-nation entity is the European Common Market of today. Chapter seven of the Old Testament book of Daniel, specified that an 11th nation would join the 10. The king of the 11th nation in the prophecy is destined to become the anti-christ, who will be the dictator ruler over the world during the tribulation.

In January '86 Spain joined the European Common Market. King Juan Carlos is the present king of Spain. When he became king, he was given the Middle Ages Roman Catholic title of "King of Jerusalem," because of Catholic Holy Land interests. The prophecy in Daniel says the anti-christ will make a seven-year covenant with Israel, so the title correlates with the king of Spain.

Revelation 6:2 explains that the anti-christ will be a military man. King Juan Carlos graduated from Spain's Saragosa Military Academy, Naval Academy and Air Force Academy.

Revelation Chapter 17 says that the 10 kings will give their power to the anti-christ. Currently, the 10 rulers in the Common Market share power for six months at a time, however they want to have just one ruler and they are leaning towards King Juan Carlos.

I'm not saying Juan Carlos is definitely the anti-christ, but I am saying that when the tribulation comes, the then-king of Spain according to Bible prophecy will be the anti-christ. Juan Carlos has all the Bible prerequisites of the anti-christ. Next week Part IV. Write to me at P.O. Box 3504, Carmel, CA 93921.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

'Lay down your mop and mope'

Feast of St. Clare, Aug. 11, 1982 La Playa Rotary

Recently a friend of mine, a very senior citizen one year older than myself, was cited on the Los Angeles Freeway for going 50 miles per hour. Huge trucks, buses, pickups, even a Model-T Ford going to an antique car show zipped past him at 70 miles per hours.

The Highway Patrol officer asked him if he knew why he was giving him a ticket.

"Sure I do, I'm the only man in California you can catch." The officer said "I'm charging you with mopery (i.e. to mope)." He made it sound like the most serious crime in the vehicle code. Perhaps the world would be better off if more of us committed "mopery" (except on the freeway).

Oh Lord help us to realize the importance of slowing down, of relaxing, even of goofing off. Help us to take time to reflect, to refuel, to recharge. Our Blessed Lord often went into the wilderness alone and He recommended this practice to His disciples. May we see that it is not necessary to rush 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

May it dawn on us that the world, especially our world, can run very well without us. It may be a blow to our pride, our self-esteem and our exalted opinion of our own importance but it should improve our humility, that rare virtue of seeing ourselves as we really are. As my great Aunt Lizzie used to say: "Lay down your mop and mope."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

According to research at the Boston University Gerontology Center, by the year 2000 more than 11 million people in the United States will be 75 or older and 3.8 million will be 85 or older. That's more than three times the over — 75 population in 1977. In summarizing the report, Laura Fried of Bostonia Magazine wrote, "Once we envision the elderly as the way they really are — productive and with much to contribute to their large and small societies — we can place gerontology and geriatrics in more central positions in health care, where they belong."

New evident reported by the American Optometric Association shows that exposure to a certain type of ultraviolet radiation in sunlight can cause cataracts, while another type can cause serious damage to the retina; sunglasses screen out or absorb varying amounts of this radiation. "When choosing sunglasses," said the association report, "older adults should be certain lenses are dark enough to screen out 75 to 90 percent of available light." AOA warned, however, that sunglasses should not be worn indoors and never when driving at night.

VENTANA WILDERNESS REPORT

BY GLENN R. STEWART

'Hacking' bald eagles

HACKING. THE word is a problem for most people when used in conjunction with "bald eagles."

In this case however, it describes a release technique. "Hack" is defined as the process of "leaving fodder on a rack for livestock." In our modern use of the term, we "hack" bald eagles by regularly delivering food to the tower from which the young birds have fledged.

The historic translocation and release of bald eagles at our sanctuary in Big Sur has now been widely reported in the news media. I'll describe here how and why the technique works.

We travelled to Vancouver Island in search of eaglets of a specific descripton. Eaglets seven to eight weeks of age—old enough to stand and tear up their food, yet still a full month from fledging. We also needed to find them in nests of two so that we could take one youngster and leave the other for the parents to raise.

A helicopter was hired to help identify nests for collection. Just under one perfect nest was found for every hour we spent in the air searching. The survey was expensive for us but served the additional benefit of providing bald eagle population information to Canadian wildlife biologists.

Four trees were climbed in two days to collect the young and we left immediately by jet airliner. The birds were loaded into large pet carriers at dawn in Vancouver, British Columbia, and released to their new nest atop our tower in Big Sur before the fall of darkness on the same day.

The new nest had a view of the ocean in the same way that their old one did. Food was delivered daily. It appeared just before dawn and if it seemed odd that the parent birds were never seen dropping it off, it was certainly a relief to find that the food was always abundant in this new nest.

Radio telemetry transmitters were mounted backpack style on each bird about a week before they were able to fly. Our biologists continued to watch the eagles carefully from the blind at the back of the platform and the bars enclosing the nest were removed when behavior indicated that they were ready to fly. That day of independence happened coincidentally to fall on the 4th of July.

The attending biologists held their breath as each bird made its first flight. Sighs of relief and outright rejoicing accompanied each bird's first return to the tower. With all the birds returning, we were confident that they had learned of our tower as an ongoing source of food during their transition to wild independence.

The following weeks were by no means uneventful. Telemetry tracking of the new flyers was made particularly challenging by the generally vertical nature of the Big Sur terrain. We lived in daily admiration of our flighted charges as they sailed easily on ocean breezes while we struggled to keep up. One bird went on an eight-day tour of the Santa Lucia Range before returning to feast at the tower for three days straight. Such forays now cause us to take to the air ourselves in friend Ed Minnick's airplane to do a little radio tracking from the air.

A recent flight located our only male eagle on a slope overlooking the Quail Lodge in Carmel Valley some 25 miles to the north of the release tower. He was back in Anderson Canyon the next day.

The birds will travel widely for their first years of life and then begin to settle into a territory where they will eventually breed. Bald eagles are mature at five years. Our birds have developed a "natal affinity" for our release site as a result of this hacking process. We have maintained the integrity of their nest tower by delivering food under cover of darkness and making observations from a distance through spotting scopes. We'll follow the same procedures with 10 or 12 birds in 1988 through 1990 to insure the repatriation of the bald eagle to the Central Coast Region.

Breaking into movies a cinch for these kids

By DAVID LELAND

MOST ACTORS can sit for hours over coffee swapping stories on the breaks they almost had — only to lose the part to someone else. But for Tony and Alana Cain, who are still too young to drink java, Hollywood beckoned early in life.

The brother and sister team from Pacific Grove needed only to audition for the newly released The Lost Boys and the part was theirs.

"I told them about my productions and I cried for them," explains Tony, 7, referring to his audition with director Joel Schumacher at the Holiday Inn in Santa Cruz last June. He adds that he doesn't remember exactly what he cried about; he just cried.

For those who haven't seen the smash horror/comedy film yet, perhaps a little background is in order.

The story, which was filmed last summer in Santa Cruz, about 40 miles north of Carmel, is a teenage vampire movie complete with blood and gore.

The plot is simple: the town of Santa Carla is being overrun by a band of these blood-suckers and it's up to a group of youngsters to triumph before the nightmare goes on any further.

And while the Cains aren't exactly the stars of the show, both thespians are quite smug at being given the opportunity to get onto the big screen.

In The Lost Boys Tony plays a child who can't find his mother — a scene which sets up the key actors in the movie — while Alana, 12, plays a young girl who is shopping for videos in the same scene.

To say acting in a major motion picture was exciting for the Cains is an understatement, and after viewing the movie three times the thrill is still there — even if the horror movie is not very frightening.

"It wasn't as scary as some of my friends thought it would be because I knew everyone (in the movie)," says Alana. She adds that her brother has become somewhat of a celebrity.

"My friends think it's pretty neat to have a brother that's a movie star," says Alana.

For the short scene in the movie, the Cains spent 14 hours during two days on the set, doing countless takes until the part was perfect.

For Tony, who was earning $75 an hour, the time was well worth it and added up to a nice piece of change.

Alana, as a bit actor, received a flat $40 per day.

•

JUST FOR the record, it should be understood that these two youngsters are not a couple of Beverly Hills-type spoiled brats. Instead, they are hard working aspiring actors.

"I liked meeting all of the movie stars," explains Alana, referring to what she gained from her stint in The Lost Boys. "It was a good experience for me."

The youngsters' first movie effort is certainly not their first accomplishment in the field of acting. Both have spent their weekdays this summer enrolled at the Frohman Academy in Carmel Valley.

Currently the Frohman Academy is preparing a musical production of the 1960s On Parade.

In addition to that, the two also model and film commercials — which is also a full-time job for their mother, Mary Jo, who taxis them around.

ARTS & LEISURE

"I told them they are going to have to put me on their payroll for all the classes and places I've had to drive them," says Mary Jo, who also works six days a week at the Old Europe Resturant in Pacific Grove.

While mom is supportive of her kids' activities, she does not come off as a "stage door" parent, who is pushing her kids into something other than childhood.

"They've always wanted to do stuff like this," explains Mary Jo. "Since Alana could move she's been involved in plays."

She adds that Alana used to direct productions at home using Tony as one of her principal actors.

The movie seemed like a natural course of events.

"They really wanted to do it, so I was supportive of it," says the good-natured single parent. "I'm still supportive of it."

Many times she must pick the youngsters up at the Frohman Academy and take them directly to dance classes.

Currently Tony is taking ballet, where — Entertainment Tonight watch out — his girlfriend and partner is Jasmine Reate, who starred last year in the Eddy Murphy hit The Golden Child.

Alana is getting ready to take part in a motion picture which will be produced locally.

But besides their acting responsibilities, the two Cains actually lead a fairly normal childhood.

Both are enrolled at Briarcliff Academy for fall classes, where Alana will be entering seventh grade and Tony will be starting third grade.

And both play baseball, football, basketball and tennis while not working on their respective careers.

But it's easy to see where their hearts lie. When asked if they want to have movie careers they both shake their heads up and down and shout "yes."

In fact, Tony will take that thought one step further.

"I would get a tutor if I was a movie star instead of going to school," he says, while his eyes light up.

The way his young career is going you never can tell — that's what's nice about Hollywood.

MONTEREY FAIRGROUNDS AND EXPOSITION PARK

County fair showcases food, crafts, entertainment

THE 1987 Monterey County Fair continues through Sunday, Aug. 16 at the Monterey County Fairgrounds and Exposition Park with a variety of exhibits and top-name entertainers.

On the entertainment bill for the remainder of the week are country music singer Lynn Anderson Thursday and Friday, Aug. 13 and 14; singer Lacy J. Dalton Saturday, Aug. 15; the Monterey County Wheelchair Comedy Singers Friday, Aug. 14; the Mexican-American band La Bande Sunday, Aug. 16; and the E.T.A. band Saturday, Aug. 15.

Anderson will play two shows Thursday, 6 and 8 p.m., and Friday, 7 and 9 p.m. The country music singer has been nominated for five Grammies and won every major award available to a female country singer with the exception of Entertainer of the Year.

Anderson was featured on Lawrence Welk's weekly network television show for two and a half years, the only country singer at the time on network television.

As with all fair entertainment, there is no extra charge to see Anderson perform.

Lacy J. Dalton is known for her powerful voice and honest lyrics. A Santa Cruz area resident, she was "discovered" after a Nashville record producer heard her voice on tape. She was instantly signed to CBS Records.

Dalton fuses country stylings with rock and rhythm and blues. Her personal, working class background gives her songs a soulful honesty.

Her latest album release, Blue Eyed Blues, highlights songs from recent years, including Hillbilly Girl with the Blues.

Dalton will perform at 7 and 9 p.m. Saturday.

Fairgoers may also be entertained by some of the fine exhibits on display. For example, the color and beauty of the floriculture/horticulture exhibit will give admirers ideas for their own home gardens.

Arlene Ferguson, superintendent for cut flowers and arrangements, will give education demonstrations each day of the fair. These will include a dahlia demonstration — how you can bring the rich color of these flowers into your garden — on Thursday; cacti and succulents on Saturday; and roses on Sunday.

Flower demonstrations will be at 11:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. in the garden area.

Other craft exhibits include photography and fine arts. Quilting, cooking and sewing demonstrations and exhibits are featured as well.

Carnival rides will, of course, be offered throughout the length of the fair, with a special ride package available on Thursday, Aug. 13. Package offers unlimited, all-day rides for $6.95 per person.

In addition to the great price on rides, those showing a valid Monterey-Salinas Transfer slip will get 75 cents off the price of fair admission.

A free shuttle bus service is operating between downtown Monterey, Monterey Peninsula College and the fairgrounds. Free bus service from MPC to the fairgrounds will be available every 15 minutes. The parking at MPC is free.

Free bus service will also be provided beginning at 8 a.m. each day between Monterey Transit Plaza (Pearl Street side), MPC and the fairgrounds. Bus service from the Transit Plaza will run every 20 minutes until 11 p.m., at which time the last bus leaves the fairgrounds.

Theme for this year's county fair is "Blue Jeans and Country Dreams."

COUNTRY MUSIC star Lacy J. Dalton will perform two concerts Saturday, Aug. 15 as part of the Monterey County Fair. The concerts and other live entertainment are included in the regular fair admission price.

Weekend contest caters to pepper poppers, tequila swillers

FAIRGOERS WITH a desire to warm up their innards and let off some steam are invited to enter the "Shoot and Holler" competition scheduled for 1 to 2 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 16 during the Chili Cook-Off.

The contest, guaranteed to test your firepower, is open to all men and women 21 years and over. Those over 99 are seriously discouraged. Entry fee is $1, with a $100 prize to the winner.

Here's how it works: Contestants will be called up to the stage and, after drawing a number out of a hat, will in turn run over to a jalapeno pepper bush suspended six feet above stage, pull off a fresh pepper and chew it.

Contestants will be carefully watched to make sure they are not faking ingestion of the pepper.

Contestants will then sprint back to the emcee, who will hand the brave soul a shot of tequila, which must be slugged in one belt. After allowing a second or two (out of compassion), contestants will be asked to yell, at his or her greatest volume, into the microphone.

No wilting violets need enter, please, as this will spoil the fun for the spectators, who will be called upon to judge the contestants by their own vocal powers. A vocal response decimeter will gauge audience response.

While $100 goes to the winner, the other contestants and spectators alike may repair to the simmering chili.

The Taming of the Shrew

A rip-roaring version of William Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew runs through Aug. 23 at the Outdoor Forest Theatre in Carmel. This Monterey Peninsula College and Forest Theatre Guild co-production is directed by James Dunn in what he calls "Spaghetti Western" style.

Dunn's version of the Bard's romantic comedy casts Canadian actress Dorian Ellis as a Calamity Jane-type Kate, and David Miller as a gun-slinging Petruchio. Mayor of Carmel and actor Clint Eastwood is the inspiration behind the western motif, according to director Dunn.

Chair of the College of Marin Drama Dept., Dunn mounted a Wild West rendering of the Shrew some 15 years ago for the Edinburgh Festival in Scotland, for which he won accolades. He has also worked with ACT in San Francisco as well as with Julliard in New York and the Old Globe in San Diego. He has been a visiting director for MPC summer productions for the past five years.

For this production he also calls upon thespians Bill Lindsay, Gwyneth Hovick, Larry Welch, Ron Genauer, Keith Decker, Tommie Bates, Bud Smith, Rhys Evan Moore, Ron Cohen, Phil Pratt, Kris Niffenegger, Michael Miller, John Harris, Lorraine M. Olsen, Howard Hinckley Jr., Jerry Cohen, Barney Hulse (as the piano player), Karen M. Bowers, Susanne Burns and Lisa McKaney.

The Taming of the Shrew will run Thursday through Sunday at 8:30 p.m., as well as 2 o'clock Saturday matinees. Tickets are $8 general, $6 for MPC season ticket holders, students, military and seniors, $4 children under 6.

Sweeney Todd, The Barber

The melodramatic story of a man's greed and madness, Sweeney Todd — The Barber plays at California's First Theatre.

The 19th century work inspired the hit Broadway musical Sweeney Todd. The troupers will stage an olio of songs and skits following the show.

The theater, the oldest in the state, is located on Pacific Street at Scott in Monterey. Curtain is at 8 p.m. Wednesday-Saturday through August.

Tickets are $6 for adults, $5 for seniors and teens and $4 for children 12 and younger. For information, call 375-4916.

Sweeney Todd, the Demon Barber of Fleet Street

A Western Stage production of the Stephen Sondheim/Hugh Wheeler musical, Sweeney Todd, the Demon Barber of Fleet Street, comes to the Main Stage of the Performing Arts Center at Hartnell College in Salinas during the month of August.

Touted as a folk opera, the Sondheim/Wheeler version of Sweeney Todd has won a Tony Award, the Drama Critic's Award as well as accolades for set and costume design. Western Stage believes their production of this colorful tale — directed by Tom Humphrey and Lorenzo Aragon — to be their smash musical of the year.

Todd has long been an English legend, similar to America's "bogey man." His is the story of a man, wrongfully imprisoned, released and swearing vengeance on the evil judge who sent him to jail.

Sweeney Todd plays Aug. 14, 21-23 and 28. For tickets or more information call the Western Stage Box Office at 758-1221, 375-2111, or contact Center Stage Ticketing at 649-5561.

Hay Fever

A weekend at the country home of an eccentric former actress and her family turns into a riotus, provocative affair for a number of unexpected guests in Noel Coward's Hay Fever, opening at Monterey Peninsula College's Main Stage Thursday, Aug. 13.

Directed by MPC's Jerry DeBono, Hay Fever, is based on Howard's real-life encounters in 1921. Its lightening quick humor and morals-probing wit still hold up today.

An authentic 1920s wardrobe is used by actress Constance Eriskson, adding verisimilitude to the period fashions.

Hay Fever runs through Aug. 30, Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m., Sundays at 2. For reservations or ticket information call the MPC Box Office at 646-4213, or Center Stage Ticketing at 649-5561.

THEATER REVIEW

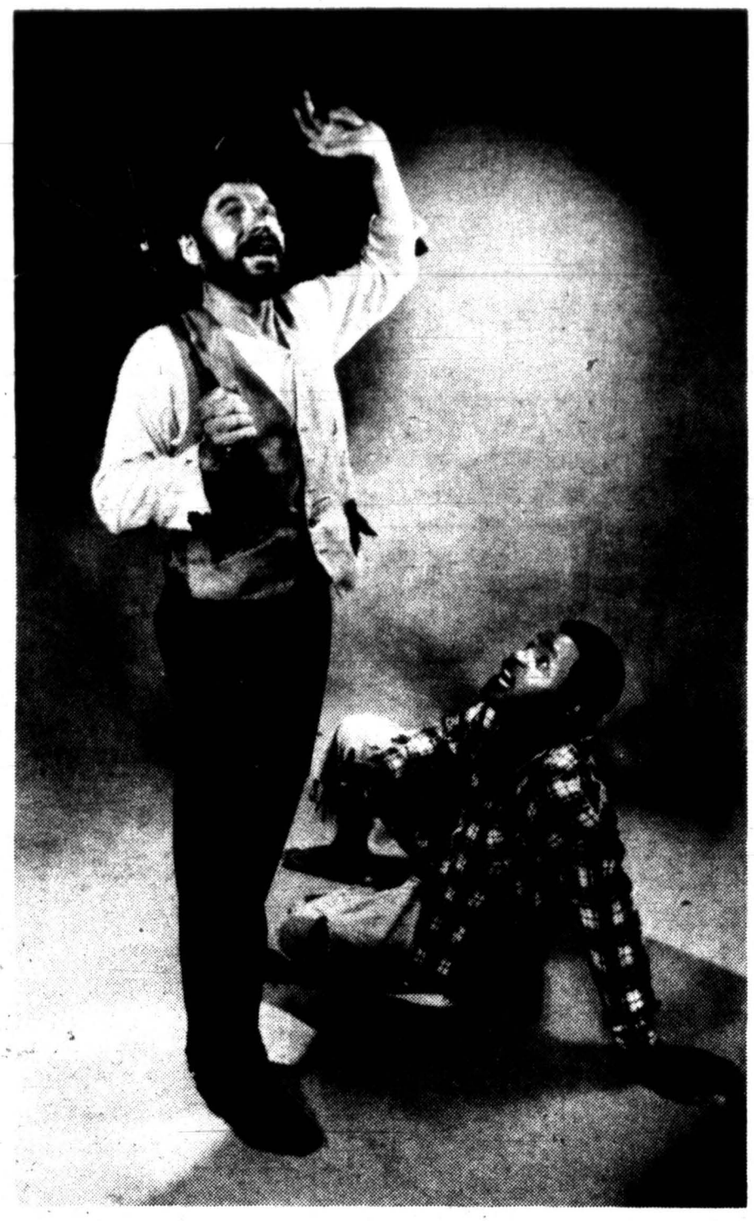
By Joe Guzaitis

Athol Fugard's 'Bloodknot' opens

THE BLOOD BOND of the title is what exists between Morris and Zacariah, the former light-skinned and with straight hair, the latter a black man. They are both sons of the same mother — "white soap suds on her brown skin," and different fathers. Zacariah, the black man, lives in a hovel — corrupted iron, sticks, scraps, an old car door for a window — and ekes out a meager existence as a gatekeeper. He is illiterate, lonely, suffers from fallen arches, and receives little of life's bounty.

His fair-skinned brother, Morris, has recently moved in with Zac after living a vagabond's life. Morris is literate, educated, and full of plans. He does not, however, seem to have the gift of holding down a steady job. Still, he makes himself useful to Zac, prepares his footbath when Zac comes home from work, cooks, cleans, and teaches Zac homilies from the Bible. He also has helped manage Zac's finances such that there are now 45 Rand in the cookie tin. Morris, it seems, is earning his keep.

The master plan is to buy a few remote acres of land and start a small farm (reminiscent of George and Lenny in Of Mice and Men), but then it all goes awry. Zac, tired of waiting for the future happiness, tells Morris that he wants a woman. Morris seems to be beyond such mortal needs but humors Zac by writing a letter for him to a girl who has advertised for a pen pal. When the return letter comes, they discover their error: the girl, Esther, is white. They answered an ad in the "wrong" paper.



ALAN COOK (left) and Boniface Leva play two South African brothers, one light-skinned, one dark-skinned, in The Blood Knot.

After their initial shock, they send another letter keeping up the ruse. They brag about a nonexistent car and other trappings. Soon we learn that Esther is coming to visit them. They hatch a plot to buy new clothes for Morris so that he can "pass" and pretend he is Zac. When Morris tries on the new clothes, the brothers sink into a racial role-playing game in which feelings run high and resentments surface. This reveals much about South Africa, the brothers, and the cruel exploitative of human nature that we recognize in ourselves.

Athol Fugard is a South African playwright who grew up in Port Elizabeth, where this play takes place. He has written about a dozen plays and occasionally acts in them as well. Many consider him one of the finest playwrights working today. Another of his plays, Master Harold and the Boys, played on TV some weeks ago and is also currently running at the Ashland, Oregon Shakespearean Festival.

In Bloodknot, Fugard brings out the extent of the fantasy life needed to sustain one in such bleak, repressive surroundings. We see lives that are limited to a degrading workplace and squalid home life. In order to maintain sanity, plans must be laid. Schemes must be schemed. The beauty of the plot is in the cross-planning and cross-scheming that the brothers indulge in. They aslo use each other's assets to enhance themselves: Morris uses Zac's wages to further his farm plans; Zac uses Morris's literacy to pursue the woman pen pal.

The use of the pen pal device here is especially poignant: the very inefficiency of the method for creating suitable social contacts points out the pathetic state that these two are in. The reading of the letters highlights the gap between the two worlds, so it lets us see the extent of their delusion.

Some scenes are very touching for other reasons. Zac walks in his sleep one night searching for his mother. Morris, in fancy clothes, suddenly becomes afraid of getting caught trying to pass as a white man, his courage evaporated. There are many fine touches in the play like these.

Zacariah is played superbly by Boniface Leva, a teacher in the Theater Arts Department of the University of Jos, Nigeria. He is also a director, playwright, musician, poet and scholar of African dance. Boniface brings to the role of Zac an amazing wealth of gestures, mannerisms, and inflections that truly captivate the audience. When Zac argues with Morris, we see these wiles brought to bear on an intelligent adversary but one not versed in the mother wit that Zac possesses.

Alan Cook plays Morris very well. Morris is the pilgrim, the planner, aware of Zac's weaknesses but not his own. It is a difficult part but Cook has a good grip on it all the while. The scenes where his latent hatred begin to surface are gripping.

There were a few kinks in the opening performance that I saw, but nothing more serious than one or two stumbled lines. The more serious flaw is the ending; it's simply too abrupt. We are not given time to cool down before the actors are taking their bow. I hope that this can be remedied in future productions.

The depressing hovel was aptly designed by scenic designer Frederick Agnew. The lighting by Maurice Vercoutere helped highlight the emotional spectrum that was traversed. Carol Jean Wilson's costume design, especially with the selection of the "fancy duds," was suitably humorous.

Bloodknot plays in repertory in the Choral Room at Hartnell College through the end of the month. Call the Western Stage box office, 375-2111, or Center Stage Ticketing, 649-5561, for reservations.

THEATER REVIEW

By Nathalie Plotkin

Shaw's 'Arms and the Man' staged

THEATER LOVERS do not think of George Bernard Shaw as a writer of drawing-room farce, yet that is what Arms and the Man, currently playing at Hartnell's Western Stage seems to be. In the 93 years since the play first appeared, social and military mores and attitudes have undergone vast changes and rearrangements. Shaw's "onslaught on idealism" in which he does a massive debunking job on the romance and nobility of war and heroism, becomes more satire than seriousness here.

Shaw had much to say that was powerful and cutting and this play was not popular in the Victorian theater. He held his beliefs with such sincerity and depth, that even though he made his audiences laugh with his manner of expressing them, one was well aware of his seriousness. This consciousness of depth was not very apparent in the rather fluffy production directed by Alan Cook.

Once past the expository first act which established the battle-lines of the plot, the pitfalls which Shaw describes as befalling the first run of the play recreated themselves. The actors were telegraphing their funny lines and galloping past some of Shaw's most entertainingly pithy polemics on war and romance. The impact was lost as a result of this skewed presentation of the text.

The play is set in "romantic" Bulgaria, a place chosen by Shaw simply because it fit the requirements of a generically written script he had mapped out. He asked a historian friend for a good war that would fit this script and the Servo-Bulgarian war of 1885 was recommended. Then Shaw had some Balkan military men offer suggestions, bringing it to its present form. Shaw had a hit with this, his first staged play.

He shows the Bulgarians as very ignorant heroes. They had boundless courage and patriotism, but no military skill. The Serbians were equally innocent militarily, but they also had bad luck. Neither side could have waged their war without their foreign officers showing them how. The foreigners don't come off very well either.

As the prosaic Swiss hero, Captain Bluntschli, David Nathan Schwartz made the contrast between his first act condition of hunted fugitive wanting only food and sleep and his later successful treaty negotiator, supply logistician and romantic hero, very handsomely.

As Raina the girl who saves his life and who wavers between highly romantic notions of love and war and a rather practical (though hidden) view of life's realities, Cynthia Peters was full of conviction, charmingly expressed.

Louka the maid, in the person of Deanne Lorett, was properly insouciant. She brought out the strength of wit and character in the part. As her hero, Major Sergius Saranoff, George Berry truly looked the simple Don Quixote he's made out to be. His vacillations and foot-stampings needed some calming down since they obscured some of the most telling and funny lines in the play.

Joy Camp and Ken Hicks played Raina's indulgent parents very convincingly, giving strong support to the convolutions of the plot. Here the contrast of Miss Camp's calm and Mr. Hicks' bluster had an antic charm.

The cast maintained a strong ensemble. The pace was rapid and the dull spots went by with dispatch. However, the idea of using recorded music to begin and end each act and underscore some of the action, tended to give a soap opera tinge to the production, as well as acting as a distraction. The music was too good to be used that way. The sets and costumes were both tasteful and appropriate.

Arms and the Man will play through Aug. 26. It's worth making the effort to go see it, but the seating is very limited and every effort should be made to sit on the same level as the stage.

Pen Women is the oldest society for American women writers, artists, poets, sculptors and musicians.

The Waldorf School of the Monterey Peninsula invites parents and children to an open forum and puppet show Saturday, Aug. 15, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Sunset Center in Carmel.

Benda's new paintings shown

A SATURDAY, Aug. 15 reception will open a one-woman show of paintings by Pamela Benda at the Cherry Foundation Gallery in Carmel. The reception will take place 2 to 4 p.m. at the gallery located at Guadalupe and Fourth.

A resident of Carmel Highlands, Benda was trained at the Arts Students' League in New York City. Like another Arts Students' League alumnus, John Singer Sargent, Benda specializes in portraiture. She has painted a number of locals, including a series of Big Sur elders such as artist Emil White, sculptor Harry Dick Ross and the founder of Nepenthe, Bill Fassett.

Benda's portraits and characterizations of the land are included in more than 300 private collections across the United States and Canada. In Carmel, her work is represented at the Mission Gallery on Mission Street.

She has amassed another large body of work since her one-woman show featured last November at the Marjorie Evans Gallery in Sunset Center.

"Rather than staying with formula, which I know will sell, I try to be the perpetual student, always experimenting," Benda notes. "In combining abstraction and realism, I've finally attained a stimulating blend of traditional and contemporary styles tha communicates and can be understood."

The artist's new work is executed on a large scale, and is infused with movement. The show at Cherry Gallery reveals a few of her traditional figure studies and landscapes, but is composed chiefly of large figurative works set against bold, abstract backgrounds. In addition to the oil paintings, several monoprints will be included in the exhibit.

For additional information, contact the Cherry Foundation, 624-7491.

A NEW COLLECTION of paintings by Carmel Highlands artist Pamela Benda opens Saturday, Aug. 15 at the Cherry Foundation Gallery in Carmel. The public is invited to the opening reception, scheduled 2 to 4 p.m. at the gallery on Guadalupe and Fourth.

Welcome to the Monterey Bay Area...Home of the California Sea Otter

No visit to the Monterey Bay Area is complete without a glimpse of this smallest of marine mammals.

Sea otters spend their lives in nearshore coastal waters where they sleep at the surface, often anchored in a drift of kelp. Groups of otters are called "rafts" because from a distance they look like small logs floating on the sea.

One of the few members of the animal kingdom to use a tool, an otter will place a rock on its chest as an anvil upon which to break open its shellfish prey. Mothers can often be seen sculling along on their backs with a small furry pup aboard.

Unlike seals and whales which have layers of blubber to keep them warm in cold ocean waters, the sea otters rely on their thick fur coats, which they spend many hours grooming every day. An oil spill which could damage their fur, causing the animals to die from exposure, is the greatest threat to their existence.

After the fur trade of the 18th and 19th centuries, sea otters were thought to be extinct in California. But a tiny band survived off the Big Sur Coast. Today otters can be found off San Luis Obispo, Monterey and Santa Cruz counties, yet they still number fewer than 1,400 animals. A "Threatened Species," the California sea otter is protected by state and federal law.

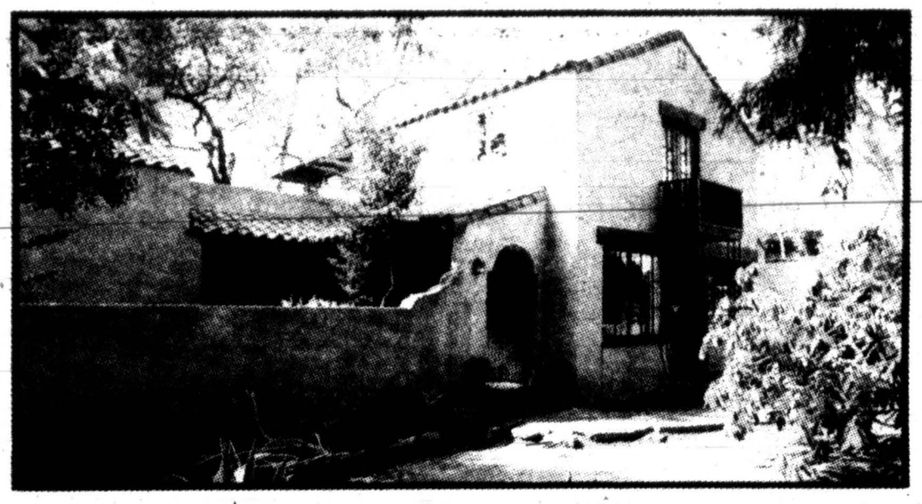
THE MITCHELL GROUP

A Village of Your Own



At first glance, it looks like a small Mediterranean village. It's on two lots, one a double, and stretches almost 150 feet along the northern curve of Dolores Street. The number is 24691, and it's quite near the statue of Father Serra.

A great oak spreads its branches across the main house, a number of pines rise above that, and lower trees bring it all together. The main house is earth-colored: tan stucco walls, brown-trimmed windows and doors, tile roof. There seem to be two front doors, but don't be misled.

The first is straight in along a stone path to an entry topped by a small balcony on the second floor. Opening this door you find yourself in a sizeable family room, bookshelves all about, windows on 3 sides, a stairway leading up to the private bedroom above, which opens on that small balcony. There's a bath and an artist's alcove on the upper floor, and a small storage area behind the family room on the ground level.

One door leads from this area to the entrance-way for the main house. You can also reach this covered entry simply by bearing left from the street. Inside are (a) a large, vaulted and beamed ceiling living room with a fireplace at the far end; (b) two bedrooms; (c) one bath; (d) a cozy den with shelves and French doors; and (e) the kitchen and a generous pantry room.

The 3rd lot (as you look from the street) is occupied by a detached 2-car garage and a totally independent studio apartment. The latter has a large living room-bedroom with French doors opening to the spacious backyard, a bath, small kitchenette and storage space.

In sum, there are 4 bedrooms, 3 baths, a family room, a den — all on a site 150x100 feet. Opportunities for privacy are abundant, and for certain family structures (example: 3 generations) this is an ideal conformation. The entire property is $439,000.

CARMEL LEGENDS

No. 29

One night very late we were hung up by a dead battery on River Road about 10 miles south of Salinas. River Road is lovely in day light, deserted at night. It looked like a long walk or an uncomfortable night. Two minutes later a car stopped. "Is that you, Fred?" asked a voice. And because FRED FARR knows everybody in Monterey County, we were soon on our way again. Fred grew up in Piedmont, came to Carmel as an attorney in 1948, was elected to the State Senate in 1955. He was noted for his sponsorship of environmental issues, and left the Senate in 1966 because reapportionment had expanded the district. Thereafter, he went to Washington as head of the Highway Beautification Program, established Highway 1 down the Big Sur as the first scenic highway in the United States, and set in motion a program which benefits us all. Fred is inventive: that's his trademark. He was a moving spirit in OLAF, which resolved the question of Odello Ranch. He was the sparkplug in preserving Tor House, the historical residence of Robinson Jeffers. He serves as a director on many organizations which contribute to our envied lifestyle. And he invented Sam Farr, our current and much-respected Assemblyman. Don't get too close to FRED FARR; he'll start something and expect you to finish it. And you will, because your're so enchanted with his youthful enthusiasm. At 77???? Oh, alright, 76!
